Local Matters.

A Strange Visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stolberg had a strange caller at their residence on Cranston street yesterday morning. Attracted by a scratching noise Mrs. Stolberg went to the window where she found a singular looking animal apparently anxious for recognition. It was admitted and kindly cared for, but what it is had not been discovered at last accounts. It is described as gray in color, considerably larger than a cat, with bushy tail, and head and ears like a wolf. It seems perfectly tame and follows the inmates about the house like a dog.

The sudden death of Miss Catherine Cottrell on Wednesday, in Washington, caused a great shock to her many relatives and friends in Newport, where she formerly resided. She was a sister of Messrs. John, Michael and James B. Cottrell, of this city. Her remains were brought to this city Thursday and the funeral will be solemnized from the residence of Mr. John Cottrell on Pelham street, this morning, at 9 o'clock and at St. Mary's church at 9:30.

Arrangements are being made for the reproduction of the celebrated spectacular pantomime, Ben Hur, in the Opera House on the evenings of April 18, 19, and 20. A number of well known Newport ladies are engaged in making the arrangements and the proceeds will go to a deserving Newport charity. The production of Ben Hur requires 150 persons.

The Board of Firewards has voted to recommend to the Fire Department committee that the No. 4's hose reel, which was wrecked recently, be replaced by a hose wagon to be built here, and that steamer No. 5, which recently burned out several of her tubes, be sent to the maker's works at Manchester, N. H., for repairs.

In placing before our readers, as we do, in another part of this issue, one of the bright and amusing Anonymous Essays, recently read before the Unity Club, it may be well to say that the peculiar title of it "The Devil of a Headache" refers to the theory of demoniacal possession; and that, if any one prefers it, it may be called "The Demon of a Headache."

Mr. Edward P. Landers, formerly of this city but for many years a prominent business man in St. Louis, died in that city Sunday after a long period of poor health. The deceased was a brother of Col. A. C. Landers and Mr. W. R. Landers of this city.

Mr. John H. Vernon, son of the late George E. Vernon, died at the residence of his mother, on John street, Sunday, in the 41st year of his age. His funeral was solemnized on Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended.

A litter of Saint Bernard pups, in the show window of Messrs. W. C. Langley & Son, is attracting considerable attention.

Past Assistant Surgeon Arnold, U. S. N., late of the Vermont, has reported for duty at the training station here.

PARTY CAUCUSES.

The Republicans and Democrats Nominate their Respective Tickets for the General Assembly—A Hot Political Fight Promised.

The two great political parties met at the State House Monday evening for the purpose of nominating their respective tickets for the State legislature, and from the large attendance at each caucus and the enthusiasm with which each performed its work it was evident that the masses of both parties were taking an unusual interest in political matters and an exceptionally hot contest is sure to follow.

The Republican caucus was held at 8 o'clock in the District court room which was completely packed some time before the hour arrived. Ex-Mayor R. S. Franklin was elected chairman and Mr. Thomas B. Congdon secretary.

In taking the chair Mr. Franklin made a few appropriate remarks and then proceeded directly to business, and the following Assembly ticket was nominated with great enthusiasm, it being, with the exception of first and third representatives the same as last year.

For Senator—Charles H. Burdick.
First Representative—Philip Stevens.
Second Representative—Charles Pinard.
Third Representative—Joseph P. Cottam.
Fourth Representative—John J. Peckham.
Fifth Representative—Jere W. Horton.

The only contest was for third place for which the names of Mr. Gardner S. Perry, Captain J. P. Cotton and Rev. Malon Van Horne were put in nomination. The first ballot gave Mr. Perry 86, Capt. Cotton 75 and Rev. Mr. Van Horne 39, and the second ballot stood 59 for Capt. Cotton, 75 for Mr. Perry and 59 for Rev. Mr. Van Horne, after which the names of Messrs. Perry and Van Horne were withdrawn and Capt. Cotton was nominated by acclamation, without a dissenting voice.

The name of Mr. John J. Peckham for fourth representative was received with an outburst of applause and after the nominations had been completed he was forced to make a speech in which he thanked his constituents for their hearty support and promised, if elected for the ensuing year, to do all in his power to further his city's interests.

The Democratic city convention was convened in the Representatives' chamber immediately after the Republicans had dispersed, and it was a large and enthusiastic gathering of delegates and other prominent members of the party. Hon. W. J. Underwood presided and Councilman P. J. Boyle acted as secretary. Hon. W. J. Underwood was the unanimous nominee for Senator and Messrs. William P. Clarke, Samuel R. Honey, James S. Hazard, John H. Crosby and George Gordon King for Representatives, the arrangement of the names on the representative ticket being left to a committee composed of Messrs. Underwood, Boyle, Dynan, Nolan and Helme.

The nomination of Mayor Honey was made by Mr. Nolan and confirmed by the delegates with much enthusiasm, and later, when the nominee arrived at the meeting, he was received with great applause and called on for a speech. Mayor Honey then addressed the meeting at considerable length, going over the waterworks controversy and other matters to be brought into the campaign, and was listened to with deep interest.

A Labor Meeting.

The Opera House was filled to overflowing Thursday evening to listen to a general talk on the leading labor questions of the day. Mr. James O'Flynn, a prominent local organizer, presided and with brief but appropriate remarks introduced the several speakers as follows: Rev. John Brown, D. D., Hon. J. J. McDonough, and Mr. Frank K. Foster, of Fall River, and Mr. William E. Fitzgerald, of Boston. The meeting was non-political, and the addresses were clean, straight forward arguments of the rights and privileges of the laboring man.

The eleventh lecture on physiology in the University Extension Course was delivered by Prof. Chapin Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. "The Skin" was the subject of the discourse, and the professor was listened to with much interest.

On the first of April Mr. David Bafnam, formerly of Portsmouth, goes to Southboro, Mass., as general manager of the large stock farm of Mr. Choate, the President of the Old Colony Railroad.

The members of Roger Williams Lodge, Sons of St. George, and a large number of their friends enjoyed another of their pleasant socials Tuesday evening.

Rev. Warren Randolph, D. D., and family have been in Washington this week. Dr. Randolph attended the session of the International Lesson Committee of which he is a member.

Conductor W. W. Sampson of this city has received a large photograph of the 1st Regiment Band of Lisbon, North Dakota, of which Prof. William Mathers, formerly of Newport, is leader.

Messrs. Anthony Stewart and John W. Covell have returned from their trip across the Continent.

Special Council Meeting.

The special meeting of the City Council, last week Friday night, was for the purpose of receiving and taking action upon a communication from His Honor, Mayor Honey, and a report from the committee on Streets and Highways. The latter came up first and on its recommendation resolutions were passed ordering the following work, aggregating an expenditure of about $20,000: Byrnes court macadamized and graded, and a flagstone sidewalk laid therein, at an expense of $1,063; Narragansett avenue, from Bellevue to Ochre Point avenues, macadamized, at an expense of $3,150; a Telford-Macadam roadbed and new curbstones in Kay street, between Bull street and Mann avenue, at an expense of $5,000; Clay street, macadamized and a pipe sewer and two gravel catchers laid therein; a pipe sewer in State street, at an expense of $2,000; a pipe sewer in Webster street, from Bellevue avenue to the main sewer in Brenton street, at an expense of $4,000; a pipe sewer in Meeting street, to connect with the main sewer, at an expense of $200; a gravel catcher at the corner of Second and Marsh streets, at an expense of $75.

A petition from John T. Delano and others, asking that the time of ringing the city bells be changed from 6 to 5 o'clock, was received and referred to the Ordinance committee, and an invitation from Hose Company No. 6, to be present at the dedication of the company's new house on April 4, was received and accepted.

The two boards then met in joint convention and listened to a long executive communication giving a careful resumé of all that had been done in the waterworks controversy and recommending that all efforts to accomplish anything through the Republican legislature be abandoned and that the reports of experts be laid before the people in some other way. After the two boards separated a resolution was passed referring the Mayor's communication to the joint committee on Water Supply, with instructions to have 3000 copies of the report of experts printed for general distribution, and requesting the Newport representatives in the General Assembly to withdraw the waterworks bills now pending before that body.

Mason-Hunt Wedding.

The marriage of Mr. Edward Y. Mason, organist at Channing Memorial church, and Miss Nellie, daughter of Rev. George W. Hunt, was celebrated at the Thames street M. E. church Monday evening. Rev. Mr. Hunt, the father of the bride and pastor of the church, officiated, and Dr. S. D. Whittemore and Mr. H. W. Potter, of Providence, and Messrs. Thomas Crosby, Jr., and Neil Ferguson, of this city, acted as ushers. The duties of best man were successfully performed by Mr. John Gibson, of Burlington, Vt., formerly general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in this city, and Miss Louise Phillips, of Providence, was the bridesmaid.

The bride, dressed in white silk, with long tulle veil, and carrying a bouquet of white roses, was led to the altar by the groom, escorted by the ushers, best man and bridesmaid, Mr. Alfred G. Langley playing Lohengrin's wedding march upon the organ.

The church was completely filled with friends of the happy couple, Channing church, where the groom is employed as organist, and the Young Men's Christain Association, of which he is an esteemed member, being well-represented, and the presents were both numerous and costly.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason took the Sound steamer at 9 o'clock for a visit to New York, Washington and other cities.

Captain W. J. Turner, U. S. A., who is at present stationed at Fort Omaha, Nebraska, is a Newport boy and his many friends here will be pleased to know of his promotion from first lieutenant to the rank of captain. His commission dates from January 22 last. Captain Turner might almost be said to be a naval officer by birth, he being a son of Commodore Peter Turner, late of U. S. Navy, and grandson of Dr. William Turner of Newport, formerly surgeon of U. S. Navy, and also grand nephew of Daniel Turner, late commodore of U. S. navy, who commanded the Caledonia, in the battle of Lake Erie.

The People's Favorite Three Year Order, another of the endowment insurance societies in which Newport was interested, has gone to the wall, the general organization having been placed in the hands of a receiver on the 9th instant. The local branch of the order is known as Newport Council No. 3, which has a membership of between 60 and 70, and which was organized here two years ago last month.

There is an advertisement on the 8th page of this paper which may be found of interest to some of our readers. It is an inquiry for the names and addresses of heirs at law of the late Rev. Samuel Elam, who was pastor of the First Baptist Church in this city in 1813.

Mr. Vars is engaged in getting out his annual trade book.

The Arcanum Concert.

The concert which was given at the Opera House Wednesday evening by the Beacon Orchestral Club and Appleton Ladies' Quartette of Boston, and which celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of Colonel Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The Orchestral Club, consistiting of fifty young ladies, was conducted by Miss Marietta R. Sherman, and the excellent expression and perfect union with which their selections were rendered show the result of careful training by a master hand. The Appleton Quartette gave a number of pleasing selections and received several encores.

The programme was a delightful one throughout, and was as follows:

During the evening Mr. Frank G. Harris, past regent of Coronet Council, made an address in behalf of that body, setting forth its aims and purposes and expressing his gratification at the interest taken in the order by the people of Newport. The Council, which was instituted March 22, 1878, with fifteen charter members, now has a membership of 258. The first assessment which was paid amounted to $33.48, the latest to $446.80. The amount paid to the families of the eighteen members of the order who have died was $54,000, and the total amount paid to the widows and orphans' fund has been $57,752.89. During the past year six members have died

The Elks Election.

The annual election and installation of officers of the Newport Lodge of Elks took place at the hall in Newton Block Thursday evening, and after the work the members sat down to a substantial collation which was greatly enjoyed. The officers installed are as follows, Alderman Waters, who has filled the office of exalted ruler since the lodge was organized, with great satisfaction to all, retiring:

Exalted Ruler—Melville Ball
Leading Knight—F. W. Greene.
Loyal Knight—Dr. J. H. Swoet.
Lecturing Knight—C. J. Smith.
Treasurer—D. H. Mahogany.

Mr. Lewis Brown, of this city, went to New Haven yesterday to listen to the joint competitive debate between Harvard and Yale Colleges, to come off last evening. Mr. J. Stacy Brown was one of the three selected by Harvard to uphold its side of the discussion. To Mr. Brown was assigned the closing argument, which might be called the place of honor. The father is justly proud of the honors won by the son.

The Republicans will hold a grand rally at the Opera House next Tuesday evening, March 29th, which probably will be addressed by ex-Representative Horr, of Michigan, Senator Aldrich and perhaps the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. Brown. A second rally will be held the night before election, April 5th, which will be addressed by ex-Speaker Reed, and others. The party is holding big meetings all over the State.

Rev. W. N. Ackley, of Narragansett Pier, a gentleman well known in Newport, will go abroad in June on a six weeks' tour. He has organized a party of ladies and gentlemen who will make the tour with him. They will travel through England, Wales, France, Switzerland, Germany and Belgium. Will sail on the Rhine, and perhaps also visit Ireland, Scotland and Italy. It will be a fine trip.

Mr. Wm. S. Lawton has greatly improved the appearance of his market both outside and in. He has painted the outside a pure white which makes it stand out very conspicuous as compared with the surrounding buildings all of which are painted dark.

Schooner Robert Ingle Carter, of the Reynolds line, Capt. Peaks, parted her chains while riding out a storm off Chatham, Mass., Saturday, and had to be beached, but was subsequently floated without damage. She was bound from Philadelphia for Boston with coal.

Mr. Wm. S. Lawton has been confined to his home for several days by illness.

Mr. A. P. Bryant is seriously ill at his residence on Malbone avenue.

A Fine Residence.

There is no handsomer, more commodiously arranged or better built year-round residence in Newport than that now being built on Kay street for Mr. Anthony S. Sherman. It is being built for a home, and as such is provided with every convenience and attraction which the excellent taste of the owner could suggest and the ingenuity of the architect provide.

It is well located on the west side of Kay street, on the site of Colonel Neil's former residence, just north of the Tooker villa, and is a large, roomy looking structure, with broad piazzas on the front and north sides, and ornamented with spacious bays, inviting loggias, handsome gables and a commanding tower.

The main entrance opens from the end of the piazza on the north side into a large vestibule, handsomely finished in quartered oak, with mosaic tile floor, and lighted by a large cathedral glass window of special design. From the vestibule you pass into the main hall which is finished in quartered oak with four feet paneled wainscotings and beamed ceilings paneled with carved ornaments.

Connected with this hall, either by sliding or double doors, are the parlor, reception room, library and dining room. The parlor measures 18½ by 20 feet and has a large plate glass bay window looking on to Kay street. It is finished in white and gold with a handsomely carved mantel reaching to and forming a part of the cornice of the same material; the ceiling is beautifully frescoed. Heavy and handsomely paneled sliding doors connect the parlor with the library which is on the south front corner and for which the base of the tower forms a large bow window of plate glass. This room measures 17 by 18 feet and is finished in mahogany with four feet wainscotings, paneled in handsome design. An elaborate mantel, of the same material and after the same general design, reaches to the ceiling which is beamed, with festooned panels.

The reception room which is on the north side of the house, across from the parlor, measures 16 by 17 feet and is lighted by three large plate glass windows. This room is finished in cherry, wainscoted four feet high and has a beam ceiling elaborately paneled, and the mantel, like those in the other rooms, extends to the top of the room and is handsomely decorated.

The dining-room is on the south side of the building, just back of the library, and it is elegantly finished in quartered oak, the wainscoting being four feet high and handsomely paneled. It has a beam ceiling with frescoed panels and a broad oak mantel of unique design. It is lighted by a large bay window of plate glass.

Back of the dining-room is a butler's pantry, measuring about 10x10 feet, with quartered oak counters, sliding sash, etc., and this pantry opens into the kitchen, 17x15 feet, finished in white wood with hard pine floor. A lavatory, finished in cherry with four feet wainscoting, opens from the back hall.

The main stair case, which leads from the front hall, is five feet wide, of easy rise, and a very handsome affair. It is of quartered oak, like the hall finish, and its balustrade is of unique design. The second floor is finished throughout in white wood, excepting the bathroom which is in ash, and each of the four bed-rooms, which are very large, is provided with an open fire-place and handsome wood mantel. The north front chamber opens upon a loggia as does also the second story hall. On the third floor are three large chambers and a billiard room.

The house is to be heated throughout with hot air. Every room has an electric bell connection. The floors in the main hall and in each of the four principal rooms in the first story, are hard wood—oak and cherry—laid in design, and each of these four rooms has an open fireplace.

The house is being built by Mr. Robert W. Curry from plans and specifications prepared by Mr. J. D. Johnston, architect.

Mrs. Lydia C., wife of Mr. George H. Wilmarth, died quite suddenly last Saturday at her residence on Aymatt street, and her funeral was solemnized on Monday. Mrs. Wilmarth was a most estimable lady and her sudden death caused many mourners.

Professor Wheeler, chemist at the Experimental Station at Kingston, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture on plant life Thursday evening, before the Newport Horticultural Society at Mercury Hall.

It is understood that Dr. H. Gordon MacKaye has tendered his resignation as City Physician, a position to which he was elected over Dr. Turner at the beginning of the year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ward, nee Child, have returned from their wedding tour and are "at home" at the corner of Mary and Division streets.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cantoff, of Providence, have been in town this week, guests of their daughter, Mrs. Thatcher T. Bowler.

GLEANINGS FROM HISTORY.

Presented by JAMES C. SWAN.

Cowper's Portrait of an Apostolic Preacher.

The pulpit, therefore, (and I name it, filled
With solemn awe, that bids me well beware
With what intent I touch that holy thing)—
Must stand acknowledged, while the world
shall stand,
The most important and effectual guard,
Support, and ornament of virtue's cause.
There stands the messenger of truth: there stands
The legate of the skies!—His theme divine,
His office sacred, his credentials clear.
By him the violated law speaks out
Its thunders; and by him in accents as sweet
As angels use, the gospel whispers peace.
He establishes the strong, restores the weak,
Reclaims the wanderer, binds the broken heart,
And, armed himself in panoply complete
Of heavenly temper, furnishes with arms
Bright as his own, and trains, by every rule
Of holy discipline, to glorious war,
The sacramental host of God's elect!

I reverence the man, whose heart is warm,
Whose hands are pure, whose doctrine and whose life,
Coincident, exhibit lucid proof,
That he is honest in the sacred cause.
To such I render more than mere respect,
Whose actions say, that they respect themselves.

Would I describe a preacher, such as Paul,
Were he on earth, would hear, approve, and own,
Paul should himself direct me. I would trace
His manly sober strokes, and draw from his design,
I would express him simple; grave, sincere;
In doctrine uncorrupt; in language plain;
And plain in manner; decent, solemn, chaste,
And natural in gesture: much impressed
Himself, as conscious of his awful charge,
And anxious mainly that the flock he feeds
May feel it too; affectionate in look,
And tender in address, as well becomes
A messenger of grace to guilty men.
Behold the picture!—Is it like?—Like whom?
The things that mount the rostrum with a skip,
And then skip down again; pronounce a text;
Cry—hem; and, reading what they never wrote,
Just turn to a page, huddle up their work,
And, with a well-bred whisper, close the scene!

In manner we are, but far most in man,
And most, I fall to man that ministers
And serve at the altar, in my soul I have
A jealousy, lest the man, God's ambassador,
Object of my implacable disgust.
What!—will a man play tricks, will he indulge
A silly fond conceit of his fair form,
And just proportion, fashionable mien,
And pretty face, in presence of his God?
Or will he seek to dazzle me with tropes,
As with the diamond on his lilly hand,
And play his brilliant parts before my eyes,
When I am hungry for the bread of life?
He mocks his Maker, prostitutes and shames
His noble office, and, instead of truth,
Displaying his own beauty, starves his flock.
Therefore, avaunt all attitude and stare,
And start theatric, practised at the glass!
I seek divine simplicity in him
Who handles things divine; and all besides,
Though learned with labor, and though much admired
By curious eyes and judgments ill informed,
To me is odious as the nasal twang
Heard at conventicle, where worthy men,
Misled by custom, strain celestial themes
Through the pinch'd nostrils, spectacle bestrid.

He that negotiates between God and man,
As God's ambassador, the grand concerns
Of judgment and of mercy, should beware
Of lightness in his speech. 'Tis pitiful
To court a grin, when you should woo a soul;
To break a jest, when pity would inspire
Pathetic exhortation; and to address
The skittish fancy with facetious tales,
When sent with God's commission to the heart!
So did not Paul. Direct me to a quip,
Or merry turn, in all he ever wrote,
And I consent you take it for your text,
Your only one, till edifice and benches fail.
No: he was serious in a serious cause,
And understood too well the weighty terms
That had taken in charge. He would not stoop
To conquer those by jocular exploits,
Whom truth and soberness assailed in vain.

A Clergyman's Address to Married Persons at the Altar, Delivered a Hundred Years ago.

The duties between man and wife are various and important. They suppose the union not of persons only, but also and principally of affections. It is not of joining of hands, but of hearts, which constitutes marriage in the sight of God. This alone brings and preserves the sexes together, and both sanctifies and perfects this most solemn and sacred connection. But where this is wanting, the mere cohabitation of man and woman, in spite of all the ceremonies in the world, is nothing better than a legal prostitution. The office says, and with great propriety, that, so many as are coupled together otherwise than God's word doth allow, are not joined together of God, neither is the matrimony lawful.

See, then, that no motive of interest or convenience deceive you into a notion that you love one another while you do not. It is not the bare form of vowing in the most solemn manner at the altar, that can possibly give a sanction to falsehood, or render innocent such mercenary lies.

Trifle not, I charge you, in this awful instance, with the God of nature, truth, your own hearts, and your own comfort! Surely of all kinds and degrees of prostitution, that which screens itself under cover of the law, is the most criminal; and she who gives her hand to the man whom she does not in fact prefer to the whole world, is almost as worthless to all intents and purposes as a common prostitute. God never winks at the violations of nature, nor suffers it to take place with impunity. But this must be the case in every marriage where mutual attachment is wanting. And that family is uniformly cursed with the most substantial wretchedness, where there subsists no love between the heads of it.

You, who are the husband, must treat your wife with delicacy and discretion. Nothing in nature is so endearing, so winning, so captivating as tenderness; nothing creates aversion so soon, so strong, so inveterate, as rudeness, indifference, or disrespect. She is the weaker vessel, and depends on you for protection and comfort, in all her difficulties. For your sake she has left her friends, her connections, and all the world, and should she meet with a tyrant instead of a lover, she may repent of this day as long as she lives. Never increase nor insult her; and as you wish to keep your own temper and peace, ruffle not her's: for crossness and asperity, especially when they settle into moroseness and ill-nature, are the qualities of a savage, not of a christian. Never, on any pretence whatever, squander that in dress, drinking, or dissipation, which you should lay by for the benefit of your family. By all the laws of God and man, of justice and love, they have an exclusive claim on whatever you can earn; and every unnecessary indulgence, which you give apart from them, is at their expense and injury. Consult your wife, especially on all cases of difficulty; it is her interest as well as duty, to give you the best advice she can. Never keep her ignorant of your circumstances: this has been the undoing of millions of families. The wife who deserves the name, will never fail to economize, when she knows that her partner's circumstances require it. Be not much uneasy though the world should sometimes think she has her full share of influence. Women of good sense seldom abuse their husband's confidence. And you will see few happy families in which the wife is either a slave or a cypher.

Mutual happiness is your mutual object; yield therefore to one another. Be ye equally yoked, is the command of God; let neither seek basely to throw an undue weight on the other's shoulders. Suffer no interference from any quarter whatever to interrupt your harmony: you are connected for life.—Nothing can separate your fate in this world; O let nothing divide your affections. Regard each other with the fullest confidence; the least spark of suspicion from either, must forever blast the comfort of both. There can be no harmony where there is no faith.

A wife should not only love her husband, but on every occasion show him all the attention in her power. Study by every means to make his home comfortable and inviting. Where the treasure is, there will the heart be also, and a man's presence, as well as his heart, will always be there most, where he has the most pleasure. And I will venture to assert it as a fact incontestible, that he who finds his home a paradise, will seldom stroll into the wilderness of the world. While on the other hand, a scolding wife and a hot house have driven many a wretched husband to a tavern, where cards, women, and wine have sealed his own and the destruction of his family.

In a word, be habitually loving and kind to one another. Have no separate secrets, nor allow yourselves any alloy of mystery; but open out your whole hearts to each other. Conceal as much as possible one another's foibles, and cultivate habits of affability, forbearance, and good nature. Never be sullen, or in a pet with each other, especially in the presence of strangers. And, to say all in all, love and live together as the heirs of glory; and may the richest blessings of Almighty God be your mutual portion both in this world and in the next.

The "members meeting" at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Thursday evening, was a very enjoyable affair. Mr. F. M. Hammett presided and a programme of vocal and instrumental music and some excellent slight-of-hand work was followed by a collation served by the ladies of the auxiliary.

Mrs. Mary Matthews and her daughter, Mrs. H. Ruthven Pratt, of Boston, have been at Muenchinger's this week. Their handsome new villa now in course of erection by Mr. J. D. Johnston on Bellevue avenue is to be ready for their occupancy the coming season.

Poetry.

The Reformer.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

All grim and soiled and brown with tan,
I saw a Strong One in his wrath,
Breaking the goodly vessels of man
Along his path.

The church, beneath her trembling dome,
Essayed in vain her ghostly charm;
Wealth shook within its gilded home
With strange alarm.

Fraud from his secret chambers fled
Before the sunlight bursting in;
Sloth drew her pillow o'er her head
To drown the din.

"Spare," Art implored, "yon holy pile;
That grand, old, time-worn turret spire;"
Meek Reverence, kneeling in the aisle,
Cried out, "Forbear!"

Gray-bearded Use, who deaf and blind,
Groped for his old accustomed stone,
Leaned on his staff and wept to find
His seat o'erthrown.

Young Romance raised his dreamy eyes,
O'erhung with palsy locks of gold—
"Why smite," he asked in sad surprise,
"The fair, the old?"

Yet louder rang the Strong One's stroke,
Yet nearer flashed his axe's gleam,
Shuddering and sick of heart I woke,
As from a dream.

I looked; aside the dust-cloud rolled—
The Water scene! the Builder, too;
Up-springing from the ruined Old
I saw the New.

'Twas but the ruin of the bad—
The wasting of the wrong and ill;
Whate'er of good the old time had
Was living still.

Calm grew the brows of him I feared;
The frown which awed me passed away,
And left behind a smile which cheered
Like breaking day.

Growth wisest for the lesson given,
I fear no longer, for I know
That where the share is deepest driven
The best fruits grow.

The outworn rite, the old abuse,
The pious fraud transparent grown,
The good held captive in the use
Of wrong alone—

These wait their doom, from that great law
Which makes the past time serve today;
And fresher life the world shall draw
From their decay.

God works in all things, all obey
His first propulsion from the night.
Wake thou and watch! the world is gray
With morning light.

Flow On, Swift Stream.

BY W. E. H. LECKY.

Flow on, swift stream, amid the flowers,
Flow on, and dance with joy,
And tell me of the happy hours
When I was yet a boy.
I watched thee with the loved ones then,
Now all alone I come again
To wander by the river;
And I am old and they are gone,
But it, unchanged, is gliding on
As young and bright as ever.

Unchanged it seems, yet who can say
The water's ceaseless motion?
The little waves of yesterday
Today have reached the ocean;
Unmarked, unmissed, they swiftly fly
Unmarked, unmissed, we, too, must die,
And leave the mighty river,
Where youth, and joy, and love, and strife,
And all the various modes of life,
Flow on unchanged forever.

Selected Tale.

A BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

Tom Barclay and Elizabeth Murray never understood each other very well, and yet they had been engaged for a year. They had known each other long before the engagement, too, but, although a man seldom quite understands a woman, Tom was even more dense in this respect than most men, and Elizabeth, more difficult than most women for any man to comprehend, unconscious of the fact, wondered at Tom's many failures in this direction.

They were very good friends, however, and thought they loved each other—had even said so in strict confidence—and, as I said, were engaged to be married. In fact, Miss Murray was already at the mercy of dressmakers and milliners, for it was December—late December—and the wedding was set for the 10th of January.

One night, the dressmakers and milliners having kindly waived their claims for a few hours, Mr. Barclay called to see his prospective bride. He was not in the best possible humor; an ugly east wind drove the sleet into his face as he walked the few blocks from the cable cars to Miss Murray's home, for Tom thought too much of his horses to take them out on such a night; a man had failed him in an important business engagement, and it is quite possible that he was a trifle bilious; at all events, he was about as cross as he ever allowed himself to become.

Now it happened that Elizabeth was nearly worn out with the turmoil incident to the preparations for a fashionable wedding. She was nervous and irritable; probably the east wind affected her also. She needed someone to smooth her hair, talk tender, comforting words—in short, pet her until she was rested; for the woman never yet lived who did not like occasional petting.

Now, Thomas Barclay was not a demonstrative man, and petting was something out of his line. How was he to know, especially in his unamiable mood, that the young girl soon to be his wife was in no condition to meet impatience patiently.

"Thank fortune," he said graciously, kissing her as a matter of course, and dropping into a chair, "this dressmaking row will soon be over. I've scarcely seen you for a month. I won't have a dressmaker on the place after we're married."

Mr. Barclay did not mean anything by this speech; it was simply an ebullition of temper, and Elizabeth should have met it as such; it suited her mood, however, to retort with:

"Indeed! I mean to have a dressmaker in the house all the time."

"I wouldn't if I were you," disagreeably, "especially against my wishes."

"And I should," he returned, defiantly.

"Well——" then common sense asserted itself, and he laughed. "Do you know, Beth, we are just ready to quarrel about nothing? My wife will probably do as she pleases."

Miss Murray did not smile. She was morbidly sensitive, and an ugly thought had lodged in her brain. She said quietly:

"Tom, I don't like that remark of yours at all. I wonder if it is possible that after our marriage you would attempt to coerce me in the least?"

Tom was obstinate. It would have been better not to have asked that question. He said:

"A woman promises to obey when she marries."

"Not always; the word is frequently left out of the marriage service. It would be better left out of ours."

"Do you mean that you will not obey," asked he, looking at her, curiously.

"Just that."

"A man is the head of the family; it is the wife's duty to obey."

"So I have heard. I never thought of marriage in this light before—a bondage. It seems to me that a woman's freedom is something not to be given up lightly. I have not been dictated to since I left school, and do not believe that I should take it kindly. Tom, I don't believe I want to marry you, or anybody; why," with a sudden flash of passion, "if you laid a command on me after our marriage, I really believe I should hate you."

It crossed Tom's mind that it might be as well for a man to curb his temper until after the wedding day. He rose, walked across the room, pushed aside the heavy curtains and looked out. The prospect was not pleasing; the sky was black, and the driving sleet pelted against the plate glass. He came back to where Miss Murray sat looking into the fire, apparently lost in thought.

"Elizabeth, I thought you loved me."

"Did you? I thought so, too, though I have been told often enough that I didn't."

"Who told you so?"

"Mamma, for one. Aunt Clare, for another. You see, mamma married papa for love when he was a poor man, and Aunt Clare's husband died before the honeymoon was over. She mourns him yet. They always said I didn't know the first principles of love; perhaps they were right."

Mr. Barclay was never so thoroughly astonished in his twenty-eight years of life; he asked, rather stiffly:

"Will you kindly state why you engaged yourself to me?"

"Well, Tom, I always liked you. We've known each other for years. Our families are intimate. What more natural than that you, the only son, and I, the only daughter, should marry? Besides," with a little break in the clear voice, "until tonight I thought you loved me."

Tom pulled his chair close to Elizabeth's and draw her head down to his shoulder. He ought to have done that earlier in the evening. Then he said:

"My dear, what possesses you? You know I love you."

For an instant the yellow head rested where he had placed it. Then Miss Murray drew herself away and arose to her feet.

"No, Tom. It is too late to make me believe that. We are not fitted to make each other happy. I am quite certain of it. Let us break off our engagement."

"And all on account of that confounded speech of mine about a dressmaker!" he exclaimed, savagely.

"Not entirely that. I feel that you do not love me, and something tells me that I ought not to be your wife."

Mr. Barclay, man like, loved the woman who was slipping away from him at this moment better than ever before, and he had loved her always, in his way; he had made a mistake in not showing his affection more plainly.

"Beth," he said, "forgive me. I didn't mean't it. I was a brute. As my wife you will be free as air; you must know that. Think a moment; it is not an unpardonable offence, is it?"

"I tell you it is not because of what you said," she reiterated. "It is because I know you do not love me, and that I am not at all sure that I love you."

Mr. Barclay's temper began to rise again. He remarked:

"This is a nice statement for a man to hear three weeks before his marriage."

"Much nicer that it would be three weeks after," she retorted. "The invitations are not out; no one outside of our families know that the day was set. I will take my theory," she added with a smile, "and go to Italy. Take your ring, Tom, and say good-by," drawing off the diamond.

Mechanically Tom dropped the circlet into his pocket. Suddenly he took a step toward her, caught her in his arms, kissed her once, twice, three times, with all the passion of a man who loves, then, releasing her, turned and left the room, while Miss Murray, white and trembling, sank into her chair, hid her face and cried bitterly.

* * * * * * *

Much to Elizabeth's surprise, Mr. Barclay made no attempt to see or speak to her again. She explained where it was necessary:

"Mr. Barclay and I have changed our minds."

A month later she and Aunt Clare were outward bound for Italy for their goal. The balance of the winter and the following spring and summer were spent roaming from place to place. Then one of those financial cyclones called a panic swept over the United States, and Miss Murray and her aunt were called home. Thomas Barclay, though a young man, was a large dealer in coffee, teas and spices. His was one of a dozen firms that failed that autumn. Dishonest and unfortunate creditors had cost him $100,000. But that cut no figure in settling up his own affairs. He cleared his stables, sold every inch of his real estate, and when his own creditors were paid dollar for dollar Mr. Barclay had a clean conscience, a stainless record and $5,000 in cash.

He went west, and Miss Murray heard no more of him. Her father, an importer of silks and foreign fabrics, curtailed expenses and, aided by a generous loan from Aunt Clare, weathered the storm.

One summer two years later Elizabeth and her mother joined a party who were going to make a tour of the northwest, penetrating even the wilds of Alaska before their return.

It was in Portland that Miss Murray met with an accident, and a treacherous banana peeling was to blame for it. She had gone out alone to make some small purchases, and, stepping on the deceitful peel, would have fallen headlong had not a gentleman just behind her caught her in his arms. Almost fainting with the pain of a badly sprained ankle Miss Murray looked into Mr. Barclay's gray eyes.

"Tom—Mr. Barclay!" she stammered, fighting the faintness that nearly overcame her, and then rallying enough to understand that Tom was asking anxiously, "Are you hurt?" "My ankle is sprained," she said, with white lips.

A crowd was gathering. A gentleman offered his assistance, and Elizabeth was taken to the nearest store, while Tom called a carriage and then accompanied her home.

In spite of the pain Miss Murray could not help looking at the man who was to have been her husband. That individual met her eyes and said:

"Well?"

Miss Murray blushed painfully, conscious that she had been staring.

"It is so long since I have seen you, and we used to be such good friends," she replied gently.

"Whose fault is it that you have not seen me for so long?" he demanded, and then, noting her failing color and pale lips, he said: "What a brute I am to question you so when you are suffering such pain! I was never gentle enough to win your love, Beth."

"Did you ever try, Tom?"

"I thought I did."

"Didn't you take everything for granted—that you loved me and that I cared for you, and that in the course of human events it was natural and proper that we should get married?"

"Perhaps so," he answered quietly; and then the carriage stopped, the driver was at the door, and Elizabeth was carried up to her room.

It was an obstinate, ugly sprain, and held its victim a prisoner for six long weeks. The party went on to Alaska, leaving Mrs. Murray and her daughter at the hotel, and, quite as a matter of course, Tom Barclay called often. He was wonderfully gentle toward the woman who had refused to be his wife. Elizabeth did not know that he was trying to win her love, but Mrs. Murray was well aware of that fact, and well satisfied, too. Tom was established in the old business in Portland and again on the road to wealth. She had always liked him, and shrewdly suspected that his presence on this planet had something to do with her daughter's strange indifference to certain brilliant matrimonial chances.

As for Elizabeth she was utterly content and happy during the period of invalidism that confined her to the house. What cared she for the beauties of Alaska, of which her friends wrote such glowing descriptions. Did she not have long talks with Tom every other evening? Though she took care that he knew nothing of her quickening heart beats and bounding pulses whenever he approached.

Elizabeth had been able to walk for a week. Her friends were due in two days on their return trip, and she and her mother were to join them and start immediately for home.

Mr. Barclay asked the convalescent to take a ride with him. He was 31, Elizabeth 25. Mrs. Murray did not think a chaperon necessary; neither did Tom; they went alone.

They were far better acquainted than in the days when they were engaged. Miss Murray admired the honest courage, the persevering independence with which her friend was rebuilding his fortune, and Tom loved her as he always had, and as he always would, and had learned to show his affection in many of the thousand ways that delight a woman's heart.

They talked of the scenery, of her accident, and then of the coming parting. Suddenly Tom exclaimed:

"Oh, Beth, my darling, give me a word of hope before you go! You were mistaken in the old days. I always loved you, and now that we have met again I cannot let you go out of my life forever?"

"If you always loved me, why have you been silent all these years?" inquired Elizabeth.

"Because I was stunned that night when I left you, realizing that by my own stupid blundering I lost you. Then I set myself to do a penance. I said, 'I will wait five years; if another wins her I shall know that she could never love me; if not, perhaps I will try again to gain her love; perhaps I shall better know her.' You know the rest. The crash came. I had to come west and begin over. I am not as rich as I was then, but there is every prospect that I shall be, and I know, Beth, that money makes no difference. I can give you everything you want, even the dressmaker, and indeed, indeed, darling, that speech of mine was only the outcome of bad temper, and"—hesitatingly—"perhaps I understand a woman's moods a little better now than then."

There was a short silence, while Mr. Barclay, having made his plea, waited for the verdict. At length Elizabeth said softly:

"Perhaps I loved you then, Tom. I could never care for any one else. I always compared other men with you, to their disadvantage. If you care to come, after some time, I will be your wife."

Out of an inner pocket Tom took a tiny morrocco case, and opening it, Miss Murray saw the solitaire that had been her engagement ring.

"I have always carried it with me," he said simply, "because you had worn it."

Somehow the tears sprang into Elizabeth's eyes when he slipped it on her finger.

Mrs. Murray was not at all surprised when her daughter announced with several blushes that she was going to marry Thomas Barclay.

"I always thought you would," that lady replied calmly.

The next winter Tom went east after his bride. They are happier than they would have been without that quarrel, a blending of comedy and high tragedy, but it does not follow that any one should go and do likewise.—[St Paul Globe.

Sunday School Lesson—March, 27.

REVIEW.

The plan at present of the International Sunday School Committee is to consider eleven lessons, then have a review of them for the twelfth, while the thirteenth is an additional lesson. For this quarter Lessons Twelve and Thirteen have changed places, but hereafter the change will not occur.

For a recapitulation of the eleven lessons we quote the Sunday School Times:

Lessons 1-6 are drawn from Isaiah's writings, and may be treated as a separate group.

Lesson 1.—This presents a general view of "The King and His Kingdom." Of the King his qualifications and his word are shown; of his kingdom its blessedness and its glories are presented.

Lesson 2.—This lesson passes beyond the points of the previous view and displays the "Joy of the King's Subjects." First their song bursts joyously upon the ear; then follow two pictures displaying the King and his enemies and the King and his friends.

Lesson 3.—Further attention is now paid to the two classes just discussed; for God's word is intended to benefit men, whether loyal or disloyal to their Lord. "Woe to the King's Foes" is considered: (1) in itself, (2) in contrast with the honors of the King's friends, and (3) in its outcome of destruction to the perverse.

Lesson 4.—The loyal class is next viewed under the topic, "Help for the King's Servants." The prayer of his servant Hezekiah brings quick and effective response from the King, and Hezekiah's oppressors are completely overthrown.

Lesson 5.—But these victories are not won without pains and pangs. We see, therefore, "The King in His sufferings." These were "among men," with whom his lot was cast; "for others," he bearing their sins and sorrows; and "to save," for his prime work was to "save his people from their sins."

Lesson 6.—The channel for the outflow of grace from the King being effectually opened by his sufferings, men are now "Called by the King." And his calls include all the various phases of solicitation which are likely to prevail. Invitations and promises, and preparations and encouragements, are here, and all are beautifully adapted to win from alienation and bring into fellowship with the King over all.

Lessons 7-10 are from the prophecies of Jeremiah, and, like the group from Isaiah, may be treated separately.

Lesson 7.—To win back an alien people there is presented a gratious display of "The King's Covenant." Its basis, its terms and its permanence are severally set forth in most attractive form.

Lesson 8.—But the King's clemency is not appreciated by all. Many spurn it, as did Jehoiakim, who is here set forth as an instance of "Spurning the King's message." That message is sent to him and spurned by him; but his bitterness does not appal God, whose message is perpetuated in spite of Jehoiakim, and whose wrath that puny ruler justly incurred.

Lesson 9.—Another phase of human opposition to God here appears in the act of "Persecuting the King's messenger." Jeremiah is arrested and abused. Then he is consulted, by the weakling ruler of the land, and by him favored to some extent, though in a cowardly way.

Lesson 10.—Judgments from the King" fall at last upon a wicked and hardened people. Jerusalem is captured, Zedekiah is sorely afflicted, and Judah, the land of promise, is desolated.

Lesson 11 is from the writings of Ezekiel, the prophet of captivity. He completes the trio of great prophets studied this quarter. In the midst of their desolation he tells of "Gifts from the King" both personal and national, the essence of which is Divine sympathy with the afflicted exiles and world-wide fame for their restoration and final blessedness.

The entire series of lesson shows how true is the angel's promise to Mary, as cited in the Golden Text for the quarter: "He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Ocean No Longer Trackless.

We speak of the ocean as "trackless." It is so no longer. If two vessels sail from New York for Calcutta, they will, if intelligently navigated, follow so nearly the same course that their paths, if plotted on a chart, will hardly diverge by fifty miles at any point. The same is true of every other route. Let us consider the case of a vessel bound to New York from Liverpool. Her captain might, if prepared for a constant battle against adverse winds and currents and winter gales, select a route not very different from that followed by ocean steamers between those ports. Otherwise he would follow the southern route laid down by the Sailing Directors; and after beating to the westward a few hundred miles to make sure of clearing the coast of Spain, would shape a course to the southward, passing as far west of Maderia as the westerly winds of those latitudes will permit. Between Maderia and the Canaries, but a few hundred miles to the westward of both, he would fan his way across the baffling "Calms of Cancer," and pick up the northeast trades. With these astern and freshening every mile, he would sweep down to the south and west, and when well over toward the West Indies, haul up to the northward toward Bermuda. Here he would have to work again across the Calms of Cancer, and then, with the uncertain but probably westerly winds of our Atlantic coast, and with the Gulf Stream in his favor, he would stand on and make his port, having sailed 4,500 miles between two ports less than 3,000 miles apart, but with winds and current, almost uniformly favorable, and with fine and bracing weather.—[Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.

As Many Divorces as Marriages.

M. Jules Simon thinks the day is near at hand in France when there will be as many divorces as marriages. When asked, many years ago, why he did not like to marry, the French workingman answered: "I would marry if I could get a divorce when I thought it necessary." Now that divorce has been introduced, however, the number of marriages has failed to increase, and the number of separations grows from year to year. In 1880 the number of marriages in France was 3,002 less than in 1889. In 1881 there were 1,657 divorces to 10,000 marriages; in 1890 there were 5,457 divorces to 10,000 marriages.—[London Figaro.

The National Valhalla.

The old hall of the House of Representatives, in which chamber the reputations of Clay, Calhoun, Webster and other great statesmen of the past were made, is now the National Valhalla. Each State has been invited to send to the Capitol and have placed in the hall statues of two of its greatest and noblest citizens. Few of the States have responded. Maine has sent but one—William King. When it arrived, Mr. Blaine was a Senator, and it will be recalled what mortal affront he offered grandames Hoar and Dawes when he sailed into Massachusetts in regular Blaine style because of Massachusetts' Copperheadism during the war of 1812. When Blaine dies Maine will send his statue as a companion piece to that of her first Governor. Michigan has sent Cass; Vermont, Ethan Allen and Collamer; Connecticut, Roger Sherman and Trumbul (Brother Jonathan); Pennsylvania, Muhlenburg, first Speaker of the National House of Representatives, and Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat. New York has sent three—Livingston, George Clinton and Alexander Hamilton; Oregon has sent Baker; Virginia has sent Washington and Jefferson, the hand and brain of '76; Massachusetts, Sam Adams and John Winthrop; Illinois, Lincoln, and she will send Grant; New Jersey has sent Stockton and Phil Kearny; Rhode Island, General Green and Roger Williams; Ohio, William Allen and Garfield. In niches here and there are busts of Crawford, the sculptor; Lincoln, Kosciusko and Count Pulaski. One of these days Kentucky will send John C. Breckinridge and Mississippi will send Jeff Davis, but that day is not yet, and perhaps will not be during this century. Virginia is the only Southern State that has responded to the invitation, and New Hampshire is the only New England State that has failed to respond. Ohio, Illinois and Michigan are the only Western States that have responded.—[Louisville Courier Journal.

Hard Lot of German Women.

"Germany is a man's country," said a titled German lady. "Men will die for their sweethearts, but their wives must live for them. If you marry a poor man he expects you to blacken his boots. If you wed a rich man he expects you to do the same mentally. A German girl is well-educated in books, needlework and housekeeping. She seems bright enough until she settles down into a 'hausmutter,' with few ideas beyond her kitchen and nursery and no topics of conversation except the iniquity of her servants and the extravagance of her neighbors. The result is that the women are inferior to the men, and the men argumentative, self opinionated and egotistical. And they all believe, from the Kaiser down, that women were created simply to cater to their fancies and bring more men into the world for other women to wait upon. Our actors are always better than our actresses, our tenors and barytones outshine our sopranos and contraltos, even our men ballet dancers are more agile than their short skirted colleagues, and in the great land of scholars and philosophers and writers there are fewer women of note in educational or literary standing than in any of the other civilized countries."

She Couldn't Get Married.

The Boston Herald says: A Leominster housekeeper while looking over some old letters of her great-grandmother ran across the following:

"DEAR, GOOD JOHN—We shall have to put off our marriage, mother is making such an awful fuss about it. I don't want to a bit, now we are published, but I have to. She says you ain't old enough and I don't know anything, and then there is so much expense about it. Now, John, just think of it. My dress will be only nine shillings ($1.50), and my new calfskin shoes would do. She says you shan't marry me until you can keep two cows of your own. Father is willing and says he will give us the sheep, but mother says he shan't, and you know she always carries the day. Darn it! I wish she could never have got married herself. Now, John, let us stick to each other. I shall be eighteen in about ten months more. Now, you will hold on, won't you, John? Come Sunday night with the gray horse and shay, and we will ride out and talk it over. Good night.

MARY.

Rev. William Hollinshed

Of Sparta, N. J., voluntarily says:

"To Whom it May Concern:

"Unasked I deem it my duty to a suffering humanity whose bodies and souls I would have healthy, to tell them of the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla. While living in Ohio one of my children was greatly

Afflicted With Boils

having 30 on her limbs, and being unable to walk. I had heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and bought a bottle, half of which cured entirely. Two years after, another child was afflicted as badly. I used the other half bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla with like results. About four years after, the child first afflicted was again tormented like Job, and I bought a bottle (on Sunday at that) and again a cure. I gave some of the medicine to a poor woman and two children; they were helped as were mine. Through a testimonial sent to C. I. Hood & Co., inquiries came from all the country, asking if it was a 'bona fide' testimonial, and of course I wrote all that it was, and have the knowledge of

Scores and Scores

Of persons helped or cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mild cases of rheumatism have yielded to it. Biliousness and bad liver have been corrected in my own family. This is the only patent medicine I have felt like praising. I speak not for C. I. Hood, but for the Jobs who are impatient and are tormented beyond endurance. Nothing I know of will cleanse the blood, stimulate the liver, or clean the stomach so perfectly as

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Any person wishing to know more, enclosing a stamp will be informed. Yours for the health, happiness and virtue of humanity."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."

CARLOS MARTYN, D.D., New York City, Late Pastor Bloomingdale Reformed Church.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

There's nothing left of Catarrh, when you use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. With the poisonous, irritating snuffs and strong, caustic solutions, a good deal is left. They may, perhaps, stop it for a time, but there's danger of driving it to the lungs. They work on false principles.

But Dr. Sage's Remedy cures it, no matter how bad the case, or of how long standing. Not only Catarrh itself, but Catarrhal Headache, Cold in the Head—everything catarrhal in its nature. The worst cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. So will yours. You may not believe it, but the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy do.

And to prove it they make you this offer:

If they can't cure you, they'll pay you $500 in cash. It's a business proposition from a responsible house.

But do you think they'd make it if they, and you, couldn't depend upon their medicine?

ROCCO SARONE, 7 Kingston's Wharf

The Devil of a Headache.

(An Anonymous Essay read before the Unity Club of Newport, 15th March, 1892.)

I am a plain man and have no skill in word fencing which makes the bystanders applaud, and conceals to a certain extent the fact that there is little or no strength in the hand that wields the pen. My hands are too strong and big not to be clumsy at times, and there have been occasions when I have felt that I would almost like to exchange my slow-moving, everyday brain for something brighter and lighter and quicker to meet sudden calls upon it such as this.

But, such as I am, I have a story to tell you; and knowing what I am you will be the more ready to believe what I say when I assure you that I have, in the following narrative, set down to the best of my ability the plain truth and recorded the events exactly as they happened without additions or ornaments from imagination or fancy, which indeed I do not possess.

Last November, for the first time in my life, I had a headache. I did not know what it was, but it hurt and it lasted three or four days, (ever since then I have felt more sympathy for others suffering from this fell disease). The fourth day of my headache was the 18th of November, 1891, and that evening I felt so exhausted by the pain that, after eating my supper (with much less than my usual appetite) I went to bed early and almost immediately dropped into a heavy sleep.

It was sometime towards the middle of the night that I was awakened by a voice saying, "Well, good-by, I am going now." I turned round and called out "Who's there?" feeling quite bright and perfectly well, no trace of that terrible pain left. A shrill laugh was the only answer, and, sitting up in bed, I beheld by the bright light of the moon which was streaming in through the window Something, sitting on the foot rail of my bed. I say advisedly Something, for it seemed to me as if the shape wavered and changed with every pulsation of my heart. I am not naturally a timid man, and (not being aided by imagination) it did not occur to me that the thing was in any way supernatural. So it is no credit to me that I was not frightened, but, as I say, I sat up and looked at it and it was very horrible. It was a soft mass, with sharp, red-hot spikes, apparently protruding from the ghastly greenish grey surface, which here and there grew purple or black apparently at will. Two blazing eyes looked from the centre and they owed an added ferocity to the fact that they did not look straight but decidedly oblique.

It waved round it numerous legs or feelers, not unlike the tentacles of an octopus, but at the end of each there was a long, sharp-pointed, red-hot screw. In addition to the horror of its appearance there was a continuous harsh grating, screeching noise, made by the jarring of these screws as they rubbed against each other, and when touched little quivering tongues of blue flame darted out and wavered through the air. I gazed at it as if fascinated for a few seconds; and then, making a wild attempt to shake off the numbing influence of the sight, I said aloud: "Pooh! merely a nightmare. I'll turn over and go to sleep again!" "Will you?" said the thing, "we'll see," and to my horror it began to come down from the rail and to crawl, with a strange, rolling motion over the bed clothes. Nearer and nearer it came. I was now so terrified that my voice died in a hoarse murmur when I tried to call out, and the Thing was close up to my face. I felt the burning heat from its red-hot screws, I felt the sharp points or thorns touch my cheek, and then I suppose I must have fainted, for I remember nothing more for some minutes, and with recollection I awoke to the fact that my head was worse than ever, and I knew, how I do not profess to say, but I knew just as clearly as if I had been told, that that Thing, that unutterable nameless Horror, was there, inside my head; that it was its dull, soft pressure which caused the leaden continuous ache, and the motion of its terrible tentacles with their burning screws which caused the almost unbearable shoots of pain.

Strange to say, this knowledge instead of alarming me, quieted me down. I said to myself, "Many men have felt pain, but I am, so far as I know, the first to have seen it." And it was a kind of relief to me to know that the Devil, which was torturing me, looked as bad as he felt.

After a time I slept once more; and this time, when awakened by the harsh voice saying "Well, good bye, I'm going," I calmly opened my eyes, knowing what I should see, and was sufficiently master of myself to answer: "Make me no more lying promises. You will go when you have to go, no sooner. This I am sure of, and I thank Heaven, which has made me strong enough to bear you, if you are ordered to torment me once more." At these words there was a sort of limpness apparent in the creature, the fiery glow seemed to die out, the arms ceased to wave, and in a dying voice it said, "There is not much chance for a poor Devil of a Headache in a skull like yours, where the little it contains is so tidily arranged upon the shelves that I can gather next to no nourishment as I roll around. So I'm off to some better head, where I may hope to find a few crumbs of imagination to feed on," and so saying, it vanished and I have never seen it since, nor, to tell you the truth, have I ever wished to do so; for, if that is one of the cerebral visitors where Fancy and Imagination dwell, give me plain, solid, comfortable Common Sense.

Only Man to Overcome.

Miss Anna Shaw said at the Woman's Convention in Kansas City, speaking of man's disposition to claim everything: "Why, there is Old Abe, the bald eagle—the men named him Abe—they say 'he' screams and 'he' stretches his wings; 'he' does this and 'he' does that. He was carried through the war and then taken to the Centennial. He was pointed out to the youth of the lands as the emblem of liberty. The truth is, after Old Abe was taken to Madison, Wis., he got tired of doing nothing and went to laying eggs. Why, even the Statue of Liberty," continued Miss Shaw, represents a woman. But her back is turned to this country, I notice, and she points to the Isle of Man, where men and women have equal rights."

Seven of the World's Fair buildings are now so far advanced that they are fast assuming the appearance of finished structures. The rough carpentry work on them is practically done and the ornamental and finishing work is in progress. These buildings are the Woman's, Horticulture, Transportation, Mines, Administration, Forestry, and Fisheries. Five more—the Government, Fine Arts, Agriculture, Dairy and Illinois State—are erected to the roof lines. The Electricity, Manufactures and Machinery buildings are being advanced rapidly.

Will Interest You.

If you are sick and have not been helped, why do you not write a full description of your case to the great specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., known everywhere as the discoverer of Dr. Green's Nervura, and who is without doubt the most successful physician in the cure of all long-standing complaints?

Consultation in all cases is entirely free, personally or by mail. Thousands consult him by letter, and he returns an answer to all perfectly explaining their diseases, giving advice, etc., without charge.

His success in curing diseases by his marvellous vegetable remedies is simply wonderful, and he has made a specialty of the cure of persons at a distance through letter correspondence and treatment. In this manner thousands of people have been and thousands more are being cured, and we should advise you, if you desire a sure cure from your disease, to immediately write him all about your case. It will cost you nothing to get his very valuable advice.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a lit le boy and I never hoped for a cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1892

Hon. D. RUSSELL BROWN.

The above cut is a very good likeness of the Republican nominee for Governor. Mr. Brown has long been a resident of Providence, where he is well known as a reliable and honest business man. He has always taken great interest in public affairs and if elected Governor will bring to the administration of the duties of his office strict integrity, long experience and a full knowledge of the needs of the State. His nomination came to him unanimously and his election ought to be a sure thing. The election occurs one week from next Wednesday.

The two great political parties, as well as several small ones, now have their candidates in the field for the suffrages of the people on April 6. In this city both parties have put up good men. There is not a word to be said against the character of any man on either ticket. They are all well known citizens. In making choice between the two the voter should look rather to the principles they represent, than to the men individually. When looked at on the broad plain of the great economic questions now before the people, the preference must be given to the Republicans. That party stands for protection to home industry, which means fair wages and steady employment to the laboring man, as well as a legitimate income to capital. The Republican party stands committed to honest money, a sound currency, and honest government generally. All of those questions are involved in our local election to a greater extent this year than ever before. The success of the Republican ticket in this city and State means the re-election of Senator Aldrich to the U. S. Senate, and that means a great deal to a little State like ours. If any unprejudiced man of either party, with knowledge on the subject, were asked to name the four leading men of the United States Senate, the Senator from Rhode Island would be among the number. It is of the utmost importance to the State that such a man be re-elected. Again, success to the Republican party now will go a long way towards success in the great Presidential contest to come off this fall, as far as this State is concerned. Defeat now means defeat in the city election in September and Democratic Presidential electors in November. This ought to spur every Republican to renewed efforts in behalf of his ticket. Personal animosities should be dropped entirely and the party work together unitedly and enthusiastically for victory.

The Newport Herald, the organ of the Democracy of this city, made its appearance Wednesday morning. It had been well advertised for weeks past and the public curiosity was greatly roused to see what kind of a sheet a simon-pure Democratic paper in Newport would be. The general verdict of the aforesaid public was favorable as far as the make up and general appearance of the paper is concerned. As to its contents, of course there were various opinions. The good Democrat naturally was in high glee and believed that now the lever was inserted that would revolutionize things generally, while the Republicans did not think the new organ would cause much of an earthquake at present. The paper starts out under very favorable auspices, with plenty of money and lots of enthusiasm. It ought to succeed. If its managers eschew personal politics and personalities generally and conduct its business upon the broad principles of an open and fair discussion of the great questions now before the people, and those that are likely to arise in the future, it will have a long and useful career. The MERCURY, the nestor of all the papers not only of Newport, but of the country at large, bids it a cordial welcome, and assures this new applicant for fame and public patronage, that, as far as the MERCURY is concerned, their relations shall be cordial and friendly. We would take this occasion to remind our youthful contemporary that the MERCURY "stands on its own feet," that it "owes allegiance to no money lender and to no corporation, and servile allegiance to no party,"—a fact which we presume the editor of the Herald in his haste to get out the first number, overlooked. We forgive him this time, but trust he will be more careful in the future.

The committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries have voted 7 to 6 that Representative Lapham's bill is unconstitutional. The fishermen of Rhode Island have made a good fight on this bill.

The Texas Legislature has elected Roger Q. Mills U. S. Senator in the place of Senator Reagan resigned. Mills is probably glad now that he did not get the speakership.

Are Second Presidential Terms Desirable.

Senator Stewart has discovered that grave danger may result in the future from the election of Presidents to a second term. He has, therefore, proposed an amendment to the Constitution which prohibits two successive terms. If the proposition should receive the votes of two-thirds of the members of both Houses of Congress, it will then be submitted to the States, three-fourths of which are necessary to ratification. Senator Stewart has not fully disclosed the danger in the future which lurks in the second successive term. There is certainly nothing in the past which suggests anything of this kind. We started out with two successive terms for George Washington. On five other occasions Presidents were chosen for second terms. One of them, Mr. Lincoln, cut off by the assassin Booth, though chosen for two terms, only served for a few weeks beyond the first. In all those cases, with a single exception, perhaps, the second term was a national recognition of faithful public service, and was highly deserved in every sense of the word. The only point at which the American people have thought it prudent to draw the line is at third terms. That rule may be said to have crystallized into the common law of the republic. It was considered to be wise to deny a third term even to General Grant, though a term had intervened. If we mistake not Senator Stewart was an advocate of the third term in that case. But consistency does not appear to be much prized by the Nevada statesman. It is possible that his constitutional amendment prohibiting a second successive term, is his method of expressing his disapprobation of President Harrison's conservative views on the subject of silver. It is true that he cannot hope to have it passed and ratified before the next election takes place. But if he should get it through this Congress he probably thinks there might be some moral power in it adverse to the renomination of President Harrison. When Senator Stewart goes into a fight, he strives to make everybody within reach come to his assistance. It would be only a small matter to him to wrench the Constitution out of all shape, if by doing so free coinage could be helped along. He is now the uncompromising advocate of the Single Standard of Silver, which metal he voted to demonetize, as he once was of the Single Standard of Gold.

During most of this week the Democratic and Mugwump papers of this and the adjoining States having been ringing the changes on the wickedness of those terrible Woonsocket Republicans for hiring all the halls in that town so that the poor, innocent Democrats could not hold a meeting to be fed intellectually with the words of wisdom from the lips of Brennan, Carroll, et al. It appears now after all this newspaper eloquence has been sent broadcast, that no such "shut out" as reported had been even attempted by the Woonsocket Republicans. The manager of Music Hall, the largest place for public meetings in that city expresses himself as follows:

Several days ago a party of Democrats came to him and asked if Music Hall could be engaged for certain dates, which were named. He replied that one date desired was one of three days for which the hall had been engaged for a Buffalo Bill show, and the Republicans had engaged the hall for another date wanted. He told the visitors that there were several open dates, however, which they could have. That March 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 were open dates and that the party could have any or all of them.

This does not look much like an attempted shut out. Our Democratic friends will have to try something else for a campaign cry.

The State Senate on Friday passed the biennial election bill and the House will probably concur in the same. This bill is considerably modified from the one reported last week and most of the objectionable features are stricken out. This bill now provides simply for biennial elections. The Assembly will hold its sessions the same as heretofore, in Newport in May and in Providence in January. The governor is still to be the presiding officer of the Senate and is still without the veto power.

The River and Harbor bill which has been agreed upon by the Committee contains the following appropriations for Rhode Island:—Block Island Breakwater, $15,000; Newport Harbor, $10,000; Point Judith Harbor of Refuge, $100,000; Pawtucket River, $35,000; Providence River, $50,000; Removing Green Jacket Shoal, $10,000. These sums are liable to be changed materially on the passage through the various bodies, and it is probable that it will be several months before the bill becomes a law.

This is the way they do things in Missouri. The legislature has so gerrymandered the Congressional districts as to give 231,954 Democratic voters 14 districts and 238,238 Republican voters one district. If a Republican legislature had done that wouldn't there have been a howl of indignation from the Mugwump press? We haven't heard a word of protest in this case.

The Democrats of Lincoln failed to file their nomination papers for General Assembly ticket with the secretary of State at the proper time. Representative Wilson introduced a bill on Thursday to allow their names to be printed on the official ballot. There was a lively hearing on the question yesterday.

The General Assembly has been having a lively tussel for the last two days with Mayor Carroll of Pawtucket. In other words they have been considering the petition presented by the Board of Aldermen of that city, taking from the Mayor the right to preside over that board.

"The Reasons Why."

One of the "Reasons Why" the new Democrat daily has been brought forth is "to expose the fraud by which an ignorant council was wheedled into granting a most valuable monopoly for a long term," meaning of course the Newport water works. Let us see who composed this "ignorant" council. The vote giving Mr. Norman the right to establish a system of water works for Newport was passed July 6, 1876. The Board of Aldermen at that time was composed of Messrs. John C. Stoddard, James B. Brown, Job T. Langley, Henry D. DeBlois and George Dennison Jr., three good and staunch Democrats to two Republicans. In the Common Council were Wm. S. Crauston, James B. Cottrell, Samuel Smith, James L. Weaver, Thomas D. Stoddard, Henry Bull Jr., Perry G. Case, Nathan Barker, Robert S. Franklin, and A. P. Sherman. Four out of the ten common councilmen were good Democrats, and the entire number had the reputation of being fairly intelligent. With the exception of Alderman DeBlois the entire number voted for the resolution.

Baptist Social Union Meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Baptist Social Union at Masonic Hall Monday evening, and an exceedingly pleasant time was enjoyed. The regularly arranged programme was somewhat interfered with by the unavoidable absence of Rev. W. A. Luce, of this city, and Dr. King, of Providence, who had been announced as the speakers. But the unexpected appearance of Rev. Frank Rector, a former pastor of the Second Baptist church, was an assurance of at least one good address. Rev. E. P. Tuller, the President, opened the meeting with interesting remarks and was followed by Rev. Mr. Smith, of Jamestown, and Rev. Mr. Rector, the latter giving an interesting account of his church work in Fitchburg. The speaking was interspersed with excellent singing by the Ladies Ariel Quartette, and the meeting closed with a collation and a general social time.

Saturday Night's Fire.

Fire was discovered in one of the upper rooms of the residence of Mr. Fred. P. Sands, at the corner of Greenough place and Catherine street, Saturday evening, and a first and second alarm struck from box 4. Ordinarily it would not have been considered much of a fire, but the want of water pressure at the hydrants and the exceedingly bad condition of the roads caused delays, and it required a second alarm to get sufficient apparatus to extinguish the flames, which had got quite a headway. The fire was confined to the upper rooms and the attic, however, and the greater part of the damage was caused by water. Covered by insurance.

Real Estate Sales.

A. P. Baker has sold for Clarence A. Carr 5,000 square feet of land on Rhode Island avenue, to Ada J., wife of John Spooner, for $1, etc.

Daniel J. Fitzgerald has sold his right, title and interest in and to about 4,300 square feet of land with buildings on Hammond street, to John H. Fitzgerald for $950.

The Nathaniel A. Brown farm in Middletown was sold at auction Wednesday to Geo. A. Brown, for $1,650.

A. O'D. Taylor has sold for Ann Logler to Miss Mary Tahaney, of New York, a house and 2,800 feet of land on Stockholm street.

Women's Missionary Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was held at the Second Baptist church Thursday evening. After routine business and the election of the following officers, the members of the society and their friends to the number of nearly 100 sat down to a substantial collation:

President—Mrs. James Townsend.
Vice President—Mrs. George R. Smith.
Secretary—Mrs. Albert W. Luther.
Treasurer—Miss Ella Brown 2d.

Three-masted schooner Harry White, from Philadelphia for Lynn, with coal, collided with steam tug Joseph Stickney during the heavy storm Tuesday night off Quonocontaug Beach, in Block Island Sound, and sunk almost immediately. It is not known whether the crew was saved or not.

Messrs. Whipple and Derby have rented for Professor Raphael Pumpelly his cottage on Gibbs Avenue, to Mrs. John Dore, of New York, for the coming season.

"The Land of the Midnight Sun" was the subject of an interesting discourse by Rev. Henry Olsen, of the Swedish church, Thursday evening, in the vestry of the Thames street M. E. church.

Messrs. J. H. Barney, Jr., & Co. have sold this week seventeen shares of the Aquidneck National Bank for 80½.

The Park Square Station of the Old Colony Railroad in Boston has become known as the New York station, so many are the trains that leave from and come into it connected with New York business. The Shore Line trains find headquarters here; so also do the Pullman Express trains of the Fall River Line; and the trains of other Sound Lines. Could these trains be distributed equally throughout the day the average would be at least one for every hour of the working day, arriving at or leaving from this point; without including the "Colonial Express" trains, the new through Pullman Vestibuled Express between Boston and Washington. This station is admirably located and fitted for the New York business, and fully meets all requirements of the situation in this regard. Moreover, it is beyond question the finest railroad station in Boston.

At Auburn, last week, a "second crop" of ice was cut from one of the ponds. It averaged twelve inches in thickness.

WASHINGTON MATTERS.

Secretary Foster Returns to his Duties With Renewed Health—He Denies the Silly Rumors and says the Treasury is all Right—Mr. Bland and His Free Coinage Bill—The Peanut Policy of the Democratic House—Behring Sea Matters—Notes.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21, 1892.

Secretary Foster was at his desk bright and early this morning, hard at work upon the business which had accumulated during his flying European trip. He looks well, and says he feels much better than he did when he went away, and there is no visible evidence of the black eye he received by being thrown against the side of the cabin by a sudden lurch of the vessel, on the homeward voyage. When asked about the new batch of stories which have been started concerning the condition of the Treasury, he smiled and said: "They are simply repetitions of the stories which have been periodically started by the democrats for a year or two past. The Treasury is all right; it is meeting and will continue to meet every legitimate demand upon it, and will also continue the policy of keeping the money of the country in active circulation, where everybody gets some benefit from it, instead of allowing it to accumulate either in the Treasury or in favored depositories."

The President and his Cabinet have fully decided upon the policy of the United States in Behring Sea, and it is probable that orders have already been issued that will send a sufficient naval force to the sealing waters to prevent any wholesale poaching during the coming season. Lord Salisbury has not answered the dispatch sent him two weeks ago today, and there is good authority for saying that the President is now indifferent as to what that answer may be or when it shall be sent. Great Britain was given a reasonable time to co-operate with us in preventing illegal sealing, and her neglect to do so is her own affair.

Secretary Blaine continues to improve, and, if he does not conclude to take a short trip, will probably resume his duties during the present week. He is in perfect accord with what the President has done concerning Behring Sea matters.

Certain democrats in Congress made a very shrewd move the other day to neutralize the effect of the passage of the Free Coinage bill upon the interests of their party in the Eastern and Middle States, and for a time it looked like they would succeed in trapping the republicans into helping them, but it no longer looks that way. It was proposed, and a very innocent proposition it looked, that Representative Harter, of Ohio, and Representative Bland, of Missouri, should engage in a joint discussion of free silver in some of the big Eastern cities. As both of these men are democrats, representing respectively the radical sides of the silver question, no politics was discerned in the proposition. But when Mr. Bland said he could not take part, and suggested that Representative Hartine of Nevada, one of the few republican free coinage men in the House, should take his part, the politics in the scheme at once became apparent, and it fairly bulged out when to the original proposition was added another, that the speeches of the two men should be reported and printed for distribution in the East, the speeches to be printed in parallel columns with heads reading "A republican for free coinage" and "A democrat against free coinage." If the democrats get no help of this sort until it is given them by republicans their case may be regarded as hopeless.

In spite of the complaints of the low salaries paid our consuls abroad—much less in many instances than private business houses pay their representatives at the same places—the peanut policy of the Democrats in the House has been applied to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill and the salaries of a large number of the consuls reduced. The committee also struck out entirely the appropriation for the Bureau of American Republics which has been of great service to those having or desiring to have business with the countries of South and Central America.

Notwithstanding the attempt of Senator Hill to bulldoze the Democrats of the House election committee into endorsing the theft by which Mr. Rockwell, of New York, holds the seat to which Representative Noyes was honestly elected by the voters of the twenty-eighth district of that State, only one Democrat on that committee voted against the report declaring Col. Noyes entitled to the seat, which has been made to the House.

At last one man has been found who is not ashamed to be called a mugwump. It is Representative Williams, of Massachusetts, the gentleman who has been playing "me too" to young Sherman Hoar all this session.

A number of clothing manufacturers having given the sub-committee of the House committee on Manufactures a most glowing description of the benefits of the so called "sweating system" of labor, that committee will think it over until the 29th inst., when it will go to Boston for further information.

This week will be made memorable by the debate on the Bland free coinage bill, and the passage of that measure by the House. About the only part the Republicans will take in the proceeding will be to see that the Democrats go on record properly. No dodging will be allowed. J. B.

Messrs. Harley W. Pray and J. C. Pray, who are associated together in the jewelry business on Spring street, are confined to their respective homes by illness.

OUR LIVER IN SPRING.

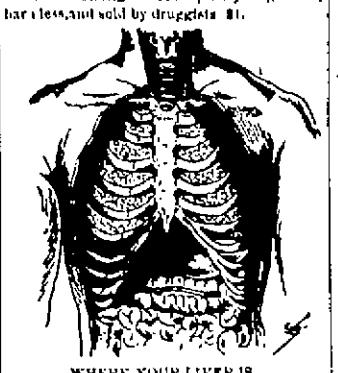
What People Ought to Know Of It.

THE LIVER.

The nerves which control our liver often become weakened, irritated, diseased especially in the Spring. The function of the liver is disturbed, and torpid liver or disordered action results. Hence the bile, which is waste and poisonous material designed to be expelled, is not properly secreted and eliminated from the body. Thus retained, it causes indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, bloating, biliousness, constipation, bad taste, headache, dizziness, dull head, nervousness, and, particularly during the Spring, weak, languid and tired feeling. If not cured, this condition leads to fatal kidney and liver diseases. All persons need a medicine to stimulate and regulate the liver and strengthen their nerve force in the Spring.

The Grip also had a peculiarly weakening effect upon the nerves and liver and thousands who had this disease have never recovered their former health.

The best remedy and most certain cure for liver complaints and weak nerves is Dr. Greene's Nervura, which restores digestion, corrects the disordered liver, regulates the bowels, invigorates the blood and by strengthening and vitalizing the nerves, re-establishes health and strength. It is purely vegetable, harmless, and sold by druggists at 1.



WHERE YOUR LIVER IS.

"I was taken sick with liver disease and ulceration of the bowels; my heart was also affected. I was dually confined to my bed three months. A consultation of physicians was held, and I was pronounced incurable. After that I stopped taking their remedies, and began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. Previous to this I could not sleep, my nerves were excitable and spasmodic, my stomach would not bear food, vomiting almost constantly. Soon after beginning Dr. Greene's Nervura I slept better, and my stomach would bear light food. I continued to gain until I could get out. I now work the greater portion of the time, and feel that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved my life.

☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 34 Temple pl., Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free.

Historical Society.

The Newport Historical Society held its annual meeting Monday evening and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

SCRATCHED 28 YEARS

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease with Madness Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $200.00 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body, and got under my nails. The scales would drop off of me all the time, and my suffering was endless, and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have this disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy, some ringworm, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200.00, you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2, page 4) in your book, "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty-eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

DENNIS DOWNING, Waterbury, Vt.

Resolutions.

At a regular meeting of Grace Lodge No. 11, I. O. of O. F., D. of R., March 15, a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions in regard to sister Mary Ann Wyatt, the wife of Benjamin Wyatt, who died in Middletown, March 11. Prompted by that love so beautifully taught in the principles of the Order, which sympathizes with those in affliction as well as rejoicing in all joy and prosperity, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, In the dispensation of divine mercy, God has called from the earthly home of pain and suffering to the heavenly home of rest and peace, the wife of our esteemed and worthy brother, Benjamin Wyatt, and

WHEREAS, this Lodge desires to express its affection and sympathy, therefore be it

Resolved, that Grace Lodge No. 11, I. O. of O. F., tender to our brother in this hour of sorrow and trial, its deepest sympathy and love, commending him to our Heavenly Father who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind; and be it further

Resolved, that this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the records of this lodge, a copy thereof sent to our brother and family, and also printed in the Newport MERCURY.

JOHN T. BROWN,
Committee on Resolutions.

The General Assembly was in session only two days of last week. Little business was transacted. This General Assembly is earning a commendable reputation for doing nothing that is unnecessary. A law that is not enacted rarely does any harm. It is hasty and unconsidered legislation that is most to be dreaded.

A New Scheme.

An Association for the Promotion of Profit sharing has recently been formed in New York city. The United States Labor Commissioner, Carroll D. Wright, is president, the two vice-presidents being President F. A. Walker, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and N. O. Nelson, a prominent manufacturer in St. Louis. The Secretary and treasurer is Nicholas P. Gilman, West Newton, Mass., author of the well-known work on "Profit-sharing." The Executive Committee consists of a railroad director, four manufacturers, who, like Mr. Nelson, practice the system in their business, and a professor of political economy in a Pennsylvania college. The association aims to establish a bureau of information for the benefit of firms interested in profit-sharing, and by various publications and addresses before commercial and other clubs to promote the discussion and extension of this industrial reform.

Profit-sharing has been the subject of a similar experiment of late years, with varying results. In some places both in this country and Europe, it has met with great favor. The workmen find it a welcome addition to their wages, while the employers find their advantage in the greater interest taken by their employés in the work, and the consequent improvement in the quantity and quality of product. The association just formed may do something to popularize the movement in the United States, and to disseminate information as to results obtained in actual experiment. It is one of many movements aiming at the solution of the labor question.

CHICAGO'S BOODLERS

SEVEN ALDERMEN INDICTED BY THE GRAND JURY.

Others Will Be Proceeded Against at the Rate of One a Day—Alderman Roth's Story of Bribery.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Late yesterday afternoon indictments were returned by the grand jury against the following aldermen: W. J. O'Brien, Dr. O'Brien, N. A. Cregier, Patrick J. Gorman, Philip Jackson, Stephen M. Gossolin, John P. Dorman. The charge against W. J. O'Brien and Powers is bribery, and the specification against the others is conspiracy to do an unlawful act.

Two more indictments were found, but not returned, against W. J. O'Brien. They charge bribery, and state that O'Brien gave Alderman Roth $1000 to vote for the Northern Pacific ordinance, and $750 to vote for the Economic Gas ordinance. The names of the witnesses signed to the indictments are City Clerk Van Cleave, Aldermen Kunz, Casey, Roth, Vierling and Smith, Secretary Zimmerman, of the People's Gas company, John Williams and Hannah Larkin. In regard to the woman, State Attorney Longnecker said: "There are certain houses of ill repute which certain aldermen visited while much the worse for liquor and while there for their own good." The state attorney also said: "You may look for about one indictment a day from this time until the whole outfit is indicted."

Judge Anthony fixed the bail of the indicted men at $10,000 each. Capiases were placed in the hands of deputy sheriffs. By 6 o'clock all except Aldermen Gorman and Goslin had furnished bail and these two, although not yet found, are understood to have their bonds in a course of preparation.

Alderman Roth made public last evening the part he has taken in the boodle transactions of the city council. He says one of the O'Briens offered him money to vote for the passage of the Economic Gas ordinance over the mayor's veto. Roth thereupon called at The Daily News office with the view of bringing the corruptionists to justice. The matter was talked over by various persons and arrangements were made for receiving the money promised in such a way that witnesses could testify to the visit of the men who paid the money.

Seven hundred and fifty dollars was paid Roth in his office after the passage of the ordinance over the veto. He at once disclosed the fact to his bookkeeper, and deposited the money in the safe at The Daily News office. About two weeks after that the ordinance of the Northern Pacific

Passed the Council,

Billy O'Brien took Roth into the washroom of the city clerk's office and gave him a sealed envelope marked "Roth." Roth opened the envelope in the presence of several newspaper men, and it was found to contain two $500 bills. This money was also placed in The Daily News office safe.

Afterward the papers hired detectives to watch various members of the council, and secured much corroborative evidence. Roth says he took no money at any time for any other purpose than bringing to light the corrupt methods employed in the council. The indicted aldermen profess to be able to prove their innocence.

ITS ORIGIN A MYSTERY.

Big Carriage Factory and Other Property Destroyed at Cambridge.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 22.—The people of North Cambridge were awakened from their slumbers early this morning by a fire, such as the city has not known for a great many years. The whole of Henderson Bros.' immense carriage manufactory and repository, taking up nearly the entire block, bounded by North avenue, Hadley, Russell and Orchard streets, were burned to the ground, with the exception only of two small buildings.

Besides this, several tenement houses on Hadley street, with their contents, were burned, and the police station and fire house of division 4 injured.

There were over 1000 carriages in the whole plant, and several hundred sets of harnesses. Only about 100 of the vehicles were saved.

Seventy-five to 100 hands were employed in the factory.

The loss will reach over $300,000.

Comptroller Must Pay.

HARTFORD, March 19.—The supreme court has decided the case of the state vs. Nicholas Staub, state comptroller, in favor of the state. This is the case which was brought to compel the comptroller to draw on the treasurer for the school money for the towns of the state. The towns will be relieved by reason of this decision from the necessity of borrowing several hundred thousands of dollars. The decision settles the case and the comptroller pays.

FIRM AND EMPHATIC

IS THE PRESIDENT'S REJOINDER TO LORD SALISBURY.

Speedy Answer Demanded Regarding the Renewal of the Modus Vivendi. United States Will Use Its Utmost Strength to Protect the Seals.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—President Harrison sent to the senate yesterday a copy of his reply to Lord Salisbury's last note. Its concluding paragraph is very warlike in tone, and contains in substance an ultimatum to the British government that unless Great Britain agrees to some arrangement, pending arbitration, by which the interests of the United States in Behring sea could be protected, the United States government would take measures to protect them, even if it were necessary to call the military force into requisition to do so.

The correspondence on the matter did not comprise the full text of Lord Salisbury's reply to the note of the 8th inst., but a synopsis of it, containing the principal points, and the counter propositions respecting a modus vivendi, which his lordship offered in full. This text, it is understood, is coming by mail, and will doubtless confirm Lord Salisbury's fondness for controversialism, which it is said is really responsible to a great degree for the dilly-dallying with the subject which he has shown. The response by the president, which was considered and accompanied the synopsis of Salisbury's reply.

The letter puts forward several counter propositions on the subject of the modus vivendi which, when read to the senate, were heard with the same sense of indignation that moved the members of the cabinet Tuesday. President Harrison's response, earnest and forceful it is said, elicited approval as its contents were made known to the senate. Although efforts were made to induce the senators, and especially members of the committee on foreign relations, to remove the seal of secrecy from these communications, that they might be given to the people for their information and consideration, the efforts were futile. The senate determined to keep the letters from the public. Copies had been made at the state department for the press with the expectation that the senate would order them to be made known, but they are still being sacredly guarded.

President Harrison's response is said to be firm and emphatic. It remonstrates the contentions made by this government in correspondence, and accuses Lord Salisbury of not dealing directly and frankly with the questions involved. And at the close it is said he plainly informs his lordship that if necessary all the resources of the United States, naval and military, will be called upon to maintain the rights of the United States and in the Behring sea and to protect the seals resulting thereto. The concluding paragraph is described by one who has read it as

"A Blazing Soapper."

The communications were referred to the committee on foreign relations, before which the arbitration treaty is still pending. As to the probable action upon that document, a senator who has taken a prominent part in the discussion over it said that it would most likely be ratified, although there is a wide diversity of opinion in the senate as to the expedience or necessity of ratifying the treaty under present conditions.

Another senator confirmed this prediction, and stated that with the ratification would go a resolution to the president expressing the sense of the senate to be that the United States possessed certain rights in the Behring sea, some indisputable and acquired, from Russia, and that whatever action he took in protecting those rights, pending arbitration, would meet the approval of the senate.

Pastor is Missing.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 23.—Rev. William H. Childs of the North Tiverton Methodist Episcopal church has left his charge, his wife and children, and has gone no one knows where. Rev. Mr. Childs came to New York from England ten years ago. A year ago he left the Unsectarian Mission in New York, and accepted a call to the little church in North Tiverton. He was very popular with his flock.

Died in Jail.

ALFRED, Me., March 24.—Herbert C. Goodrce, who was held on a charge of burning the Whipple House in Kittery, died in the county jail, where he had been confined since March 14. He was insane, beyond question, when he was committed, and was also suffering from liver and heart trouble. He was a veteran and pensioner of the war, and was about 50 years of age.

After Many Months.

DUNBAR, Pa., March 25.—The dead have been wrested from their untimely tomb and all that remains now is to accord a Christian burial to the miners who met their fate in the Hill Farm mine at Dunbar June 16, 1890. Wednesday the bodies of twenty-three of the miners were found and yesterday they were brought to the surface for burial.

Will Stay at Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 25.—Two or three months ago President Harper of Chicago university offered to Professor John W. White of Harvard the position of head of the Greek department at the university, with a salary of $7000. Professor White has just made public his decision not to accept the offer.

Business Man Missing.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 19.—Hermann Bartlehness, of the firm of Bartlehness & Dundon of this city, has been missing from his home since Wednesday last. No reason can be assigned for his absence. Bartlehness is a member of several German societies and has a family.

Assorted of Her Library.

ARLINGTON, Mass., March 19.—Arlington, by the will of Mrs. Maria C. Robbins, who died recently in New York, leaving an estate valued at $2,000,000, receives $10,000, a plot of land and a sufficient sum to complete the public library here, which she had already endowed with $50,000.

Progressing Favorably.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Senator Morrill's condition remains unchanged, but he sleeps well and gives evidence of a good appetite. His complete recovery is expected in a short time.

Skipped with Music.

WATERBURY, Conn., March 25.—F. H. Blake, leader of the American band of this city, started off last night with over $50 worth of music and instruments belonging to the band.

The cigarette has found a scientific friend in Professor Babcock, a prominent botanist and expert, who informs the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on Health that it is the least harmful way of smoking, providing the smoke is not inhaled. That is just where the trouble is. The only way of getting a satisfactory smoke out of the pesky little things is by inhalation, and then the mischief is done.

Farm and Family

Farm Hints.

Occasionally we see an article from some "progressive farmer," who advocates the planting of artichokes for pigs, as the pigs will dig the roots themselves. The artichoke in good land quickly becomes a troublesome weed unless the pig or some one else root them out to the very last tuber. It would be better to plant potatoes for that purpose, and then it will pay better, even in a year of abundance like last year, to dig the potatoes and sell the best, giving the poorest to the hogs, and selling all the marketable ones than to let the pigs dig them.

The box with square corners is the best form for wooden silos and water tanks. The round tub may take less lumber in the manufacture, but the labor of making is so much increased as to more than overbalance the saving in cost of material.

A fruit grower in Ohio says: "Be careful in using buckwheat as a green manure either for small fruits or vegetables." He has known of cases where the plowing under of buckwheat, or the use of buckwheat straw as a mulching, has been the cause of serious injury to the strawberry crop.

Those who have only wagons with narrow wheels to do their teaming about the farm would find an advantage in having wooden hoops six inches wide made to put on over the wheels; a few spokes and a ring to slip on the hub of the wheel are all that is needed, and any wheelwright can easily make them. They make the load draw easier, and when it is necessary to pass over grass ground they do not cut it up. They are needed in the spring while the ground is soft, but are often handy in haying time and at other seasons. We hope to see the time when the law will say that no man shall carry a load of one ton excepting that the tires of his wheels are four inches wide. Then we shall have better roads.

Do not change your business or system of farming, if you have any system, too often. If you have a crop, whether milk or potatoes, pigs or strawberries, that you know how to manage, and produce as good as anybody does and do it as cheaply, "stick to it, and keep on sticking to it." No matter if over-production has reduced the market price down to what it costs you to produce it. Those whom it cost more than it did you will lose more money than you will, and will the sooner get out. If you find you are losing money where others succeed in making it upon the same crops, then you are the one to get out or else you must hustle round and find out how they do it. Don't be too proud to learn, even from those who are not as wise as you are in some things, and don't be too obstinate to change when you see you have been wrong.

"The curl in the pig's tail is worth a dollar," says an experienced breeder, pointing to a fine specimen. And so it was. It indicated good health, vigorous constitution and thrifty condition. The pig's tail uncurls and droops as soon as he is sick, as surely as the dog's tail does when he is frightened. Keep a good watch of that and you will find out the sick, weakly and unthrifty pigs almost at a glance. Having made the discovery, then take them out and keep them out of the herd. If they have not a disease that will infect the others, the others will probably kill them by crowding them at the trough and in the sleeping quarters.

With good care more lambs ought to be raised each year than there were ewes in the beginning. That is, about 20 per cent. of the flock ought to drop twin lambs, and 05 per cent. of those dropped should be raised. Some breeds are even more prolific, and 40 per cent. will drop twins or triplets. And the prolific breeds are the best milkers, so that twins are more frequently raised with them than with the breeds that do not often drop twins. Keeping the ram too fat is often the reason that he does not get more lambs.

White oats are said to have five per cent. more feeding value, by the pound, than black oats, but a pound of heavy oats is much more valuable than a pound of light oats.

Do the horses earn 30 cents a day the year through? They cannot be kept for less around Boston, or where hay and grain is not very low.

That the strongest, most vigorous and easiest fattened pigs come from three-year-old parents is the verdict of an experienced breeder.

The driver ought to put the bits in his own mouth before he puts them in the horses' mouth on a frosty morning. He probably will not do it more than once or twice, but he will dip them into a bucket of water to take the frost out, or warm by the stove, before he tries them on the horse the next time. Some have them covered with leather or rubber, which is not a bad idea, either.

We used to hear about people who were as "independent as a hog on ice." They would neither go ahead or stand still. But neither the hog nor cow has any business on the ice, and if there are any places in their yards where ice is likely to form, they should be filled up at once.

Not only in hogs but in beef animals has the demand changed in regard to the size of the animals wanted in the market. The well-fattened steer weighing from 1300 to 1500 pounds alive, and from 800 to 850 pounds dressed, sells most readily and at the best prices in this country and in Liverpool.

To make the floor of the cellar or the poultry house rat proof, at a small expense, or to make a solid walk around the house, take 20 or 30 bushels of coal ashes, cinders and all, and mix it into one bushel of freshly slacked lime, made quite thin in the slacking. Mix this thoroughly and cover the surface with it, making it three or four inches thick and pounding it down hard. As the material is not expensive, go over it three or four times, especially if any part of it is likely to be driven over by a wagon. In fact, where it is liable to be crossed by heavy teams in the spring, it would be better to make it thicker, and to make a sloping edge to it. In the cellar and poultry house plaster the walls with the same for a foot high or more, crowding it hard into all crevices.

The farmer should learn to know and protect all the insect-eating birds. The woodpeckers, the swallows and all the native sparrows are insect eaters, although the latter eat the seeds of many weeds, and a few of them eat some small grain. All the thrushes are insect eaters, but the catbird eats much small fruit in the season, as also does the robin, but their service in keeping down insects more than repays for this. The same might be said of the robin. The New England robin and all birds with hanging nests are insect eaters, and the blackbird, by destroying large numbers of insects, atones in part for the mischief he does in newly planted cornfields.

At a meeting of the Wisconsin Dairymen's State Association, Prof. I. P. Roberts stated that the solid and liquid manure from a 1000-pound horse would weigh about seven tons in a year, and that from a cow it would be about 10 tons a year. Such manure shows a value, by analysis, of from $2 to $3 per ton, but as all is not soluble, the actual value would be about one-half or one-third that amount. Much of this value is lost by leaching and evaporation, and not all of it is saved, as the animals are not in the barn all of the time.

Corn stover should have been used up before this time. If it has been kept dry it has become tough and woody, and has lost much of its feeding value. If it has not been kept dry it is moldy or will soon mold, and although cattle may eat it very well, it is not wholesome for them, and imparts a bad flavor and a tendency to spoil quickly to both the milk and the cream and all that is made from them.

It is an excellent plan to procure seeds early enough to test them before sowing. Placing them in a folded cloth between two layers of cotton batting and keeping it moist, but not too wet, in a warm place, will soon tell how many of them are likely to germinate. Sowing seed that will not sprout is a loss of seed, manure and time. Often when the failure is found it is too late to put a desirable crop upon that place.

As many of the papers are advocating the planting of pecan trees in Northern States, as far as they can withstand the winter climate, it may be well to listen to a word of caution from an experienced grower of them in Texas, where they are native. He says it is very easy to transplant a pecan tree and make it live, but in transplanting the tap root is cut off, and it makes a sickly growth, and will never bear a nut, while if the seed is planted where they are wanted to grow they will grow much more thrifty and bear well.

The Northern farmer will do better with the chestnut. They also are difficult to transplant, but grow readily from the seed, come to bearing in ten or twelve years, and it is very seldom that our markets are well supplied with them. They can, if it is desired, be grafted with scions from European varieties, which are larger, and usually a better nut than the American variety, and they come into bearing earlier. A variety from Japan is spoken of in a bulletin from the Pennsylvania Experiment Station as being a smaller tree, bearing a larger nut than the European varieties, and bearing when four or five years old, but there are doubts about its being hardy even in the Middle States. The seeds of the European kinds grow readily here, and if protected a little while small, appear to be as hardy as our common chestnut. Perhaps the Japanese kind might become acclimated in a similar manner.

The farmer who needs a new mowing machine, reaper or horse rake will probably think of it before the time comes to use it. If he does not, some agent will be apt to come along and remind him of it; but how about the small tools, as plows, shovels, hoes, baskets, and all the rest? It would be a good idea to look around while there is time, and see what will be needed when the work begins. It will be provoking to have to make a trip to town on purpose for some little thing that could as well have been bought weeks before.—[Am. Cultivator.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

The Origin of Leap Year Proposals

The custom of permitting the fair sex to assume the rights and prerogatives appertaining to their brothers once every four years is a very ancient one, and when it originated is not definitely known. The first statutory recognition of the custom, however, was a law passed by the Scottish Parliament in the year 1288, 604 years ago, which statute provided as follows:

"It is statut and ordainit that during the rein of hir maist bliasit Megestie, ilk for the yeare, known as Leap Yeare, ilk Maiden ladye of baith highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeak ye sho likes, albeit, gif he refuses to taik hir to be his lawfull wedit wyfe, he shall be mulcted [whatever that may be] in ye summe of aue dundis or less, as his estait moit be, except and swis gif he can maik it appeare that he is betrothit aue ither woman, that he then shall be free."

In 1321 France enacted similar laws, and before Columbus set out on his voyage of discovery Genoese and Florentine maidens "of baith highe and lowe estait" had all the privileges in that line which their Scottish and English sisters enjoyed.

Artesian Irrigation in Algeria.

In the year 1857 the French engineer, M. Jus, demonstrated that that portion of the Sahara Desert included within the area of French Algeria contained large underground supplies of water, and the number of wells bored since that time in the departments of Algiers Oran and Constantine amounts to more than 13,000. These wells vary from 100 to 400 feet in depth, and the pressure of the water forces it a couple of feet above the surface of the ground. It is then led into ditches and is carried in this way to the vineyards, date trees, and wheat fields. No fewer than twelve million acres of barren land have been made fruitful in this way, and enterprise representing perhaps the most remarkable example of irrigation by means of artesian well which can anywhere be found. Algeria owes to this method of cultivation that it is becoming a most important wine-producing country as may be gauged from the fact that it sent to France in 1886, 10,500,000 gallons.—[Chambers' Journal.

Errors of Youth.
SUFFERERS FROM
Nervous Debility, Youthful Indiscretions, Lost Manhood, BE YOUR OWN PHYSICIAN!

HOPE

Many men, from the effects of youthful imprudence, have brought about a state of weakness that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever being suspected, they are doctored for everything but the right one. Notwithstanding the many valuable remedies that medical science has produced for the relief of this class of patients, none of the ordinary modes of treatment effect a cure. During our extensive college and hospital practice we have experimented with and discovered new and concentrated remedies. The accompanying prescription is offered as a certain and speedy cure, as hundreds of cases in our practice have been restored to perfect health by its use after all other remedies failed. Perfectly pure ingredients must be used in the preparation of this prescription.

℞— Erythroxylon coca, 4 drachms (drachm), Damiana, 4 drachm, Helonias, 1 drachm, Gelsemin, 1 grains, Extract nux amara (alcoholic), 8 grains, Extract cascarin, 2 scruples, Glycerine, q. s. Mix.

Make 60 pills. Take 1 pill at 8 p. m., and another on going to bed. In some cases it will be necessary for the patient to take two pills at bedtime, making the number three a day. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, and especially in those cases resulting from imprudence. The recuperative powers of this restorative are truly astonishing, and in one occasioned for a short time change the languid, debilitated, nervous condition to one of renewed vigor and strength.

As we are constantly in receipt of letters of inquiry relative to this remedy, we would say to those who would prefer to obtain it of us, by remitting $1, a securely sealed package containing 60 pills, carefully compounded, will be sent by return mail from our private laboratory, or we will furnish 3 packages, which will cure most cases, for $5.

Indigestion, Dyspepsia

Symptoms.—Distress or oppression after eating, acid eruptions, belching up of gas or acid, loss of appetite and strength, nausea, headache, palpitation, sallow complexion, depressed spirits, hideous dreams, and a multitude of other miseries too well known to the average American.

To us science has never given a remedy for this distressing disorder, but Nature has given to the untutored Indian a never-failing remedy. It is undeniable that Nature provides for every want of man and beast; and, through the noble Kickapoo tribe of Indians, she has given us a vegetable compound of herbs, roots, barks, and flowers, called which is unfailing in its cure of all digestive and blood disorders. Indigestion and Dyspepsia are frequently caused by impure blood. Sagwa is Nature's own blood purifier and regulator of the human system.

"Deputy Sheriff ORDWAY, of Epping, N. H., says: "I have used your Sagwa for long-standing Dyspepsia with unqualified success. I would not be without it."

AROUND THE WORLD.

Scenes and Incidents of Travel in India—The People, their Habits and Achievements—Tombs, Mosques and Gardens of Cyclopean Grandeur and Oriental Magnificence.

(BY HON. NICHOLAS BALL.)

DELHI, INDIA, January 10, 1892.

On the morning of January 11, we drove to Sikandra, a distance of about five miles along what may be called the "Appian Way" of Agra, as it is bordered on both sides by tombs. On the way we entered a gateway made of beautiful stone arranged in the modern Hindu style, and found within a very imposing carved sandstone building some 300 years old. A mile further on, somewhat similar but more beautiful gateway admits us to a garden of Oriental magnificence, in which is a four-story building of delicate proportions, the upper story being of snow white marble with latticed windows, and surmounted by four diminutive kiosques. This is the tomb of the great Emperor Akbar, who died Oct. 15, 1605, and was erected by his son and successor, Jahangir. "This tomb," wrote the traveler Finch, about 1615, "is much worshipped both by Moors and Gentiles, holding him for a great saint." At the head and foot of the marble tombstone are the words, "Allaho Akbar! Jilli Julahu Hool!" There are also 99 other inscriptions, which our guide said were distinct titles of the Creator. At the head of the tomb stands a short pillar, intended to support the famous Kohinoor diamond, which is said to have rested there for many years. Round the tomb were placed the clothes, books and arms of Akbar, ready for immediate use in case he should rise, but predatory tribes have removed them. How suggestive is this of the manner of burying an Indian chief in America! Of this beautiful mausoleum Bayard Taylor wrote: "I thought the Alcazar of Seville and the Alhambra of Granada had already presented me with the purest type of Saracenic, but I was mistaken. What! had seen of the splendors of the Moghuls, and what I then saw, overpowered me like a magnificent dream." Of the tomb itself, Mr. Taylor said: "Beneath is the dust of Akbar, one of the greatest men who ever wielde l a sceptre, the fourth descendant in a direct line from Tamarlane, the grandson of Baber the Conqueror, and grandfather of Shah Juhan; in him culminated the wisdom, the power, and the glory of that illustrious line. I doubt if the annals of any family that ever reigned can furnish six successive monarchs comparable in greatness of their endowments and splendor of their rule, to Baber, Humayun, Akbar, Jahangir, Shah Juhan, and Aurangzeb."

This mausoleum, which is a square, of 300 feet on a side, rises to the height of 100 feet. It stands in the centre of a large garden, and from it massive stone causeways diverge to four gates of red sandstone, 70 feet high, one at the centre of each side. The luxuriant vegetation of the tropics abounds on every hand, and fountains play on each of the causeways.

Sikandra derives its name from that of Alexander the Great, who won a great battle on the Jhelum river, not many miles away. We visited other mausoleum, only less beautiful than that described above, and then returned to Agra along a road whose distances are measured by kos minar, or milestones about two miles and a half apart.

Agra, with a population of 165,000, was little known to history before 1560 A. D., when Akbar established his palace here. It lies on the west bank of the Jumna, 841 miles from Calcutta and 139 miles from Delhi. The walls enclose a space of 11 square miles, once thickly populated, although only about one-half is now occupied, the remainder consisting of ruins and small tracts of desert. The city has a large trade in cotton and salt.

The fort here is an imposing structure, its vast red walls rising to a height of 70 feet, and making a circuit of a mile and a half. It is crenellated throughout, and has a general air of impregnability, although our guide told us that it is really little more than a veneering of sandstone on banks of earth and rubble masonry. Within these walls are most of the magnificent Mogul buildings for which Agra is so justly celebrated.

The Moti Musjid or Pearl Mosque is described by Ferguson as "one of the purest and most elegant buildings of its class to be found anywhere." The exterior facings are of red sandstone, with veined marble within, white, blue and gray. It is surmounted by three marble domes and by gilded spires, the whole most striking in effect, especially when seen from a distance, sparkling in the bright sunlight. Its courtyard is wholly of white marble from the pavement to the top of the lofty domes. Its 24 engrailed arches and groined vaults are almost bewildering in their perspective.

The palace, of sandstone without in the lower stories, but of white marble above and throughout the interior, is most elaborately wrought, with inlaid and mosaic work in profusion. Marble caskets glitter with the ornamentation of rare stones, and marble balustrades above look like fringes of lace along the battlements. From the balconies of the women's apartments can be seen the Jumna laving the walls 70 feet below, and beyond, for mile after mile, the rare and varied beauties of "India's coral strand." The size of this palace is indicated by the fact that its great inner court is 500x370 feet, approached through a succession of beautiful courts of smaller size, although one is 308x76 feet, and another in the rear is 235x170 feet. Among the most interesting parts of this building are the elaborately decorated baths, especially one whose rooms and corridors are ornamented with thousands of small mirrors in most kaleidoscopic designs.

We found in the fort a tablet on which was inscribed in letters of gold: "In grateful commemoration of services rendered to Posterity by Honorable Sir John Strachey, C. C. S. J., to whom, not forgetting the enlightened sympathy and timely care of others, are we indebted for the restoration and present beauty of the Taj Mahal and other famous monuments of the ancient arts and history of these provinces formerly administered by him, this tablet is placed by order of his friend, the Earl of Lytton, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, A. D. 1880."

A few years ago the Prince of Wales traveled extensively in India, and, in order that he might see them in all their original splendor, several rooms and corridors in the Pearl Mosque and the Marble Palace were restored at great expense.

Along the river is a very solid road which was built in 1835 for the purpose of giving employment to the famine-stricken natives. Passing along this about a mile we came to the Taj Maha, whose full title is Taj bibi ke Roza, or "the Crown Lady's Tomb." It was begun in 1629 by Shah Jahan, as a mausoleum for his favorite queen, Arjmaird Banu, the "Chosen of the Palace," and was finished in 1648. She was a granddaughter of Mirza Ghiyas, a Persian, who came from Tehran and became powerful under the name of Itimadu'ddaulah. She had seven children by Jahan, and died in giving birth to the eighth in 1629.

We enter by the Taj Ganj Gate, an outer court 880x440 ft. in size, in which is a noble caravansary on one side and an equally fine structure opposite. In front is a gateway of wondrous beauty, of red sandstone inlaid with ornaments and texts from the Koran, and surmounted by 26 cupolas of snowy marble. Within is a landscape garden, enclosed by a towering wall of sandstone, with arched galleries around the interior. Passing down an avenue of dark Italian cypress, we find 23 fountains sending up their sparkling jets along the course of a rippling brook. On either hand are beds of rarest flowers and shrubs; and from the lofty palms and bamboos or wide-spreading banyans rolls the gushing melody of birds of most brilliant plumage upon the air heavy with the fragrance of roses and lemon blossoms. We are prepared to expect something very fine as the central object for which such surroundings have been created; but not for the full reality of the Taj, which now presents itself to our gaze in all the splendor of the acme of Oriental magnificence.

A plinth of marble, 313 feet square, rises from the shrubbery and flowers to the height of 18½ feet from its lower four-foot platform, supporting at each corner, a marble tower 137 feet high crowned with a little pavilion; and, in the middle, the mausoleum proper, 186 feet square with a dome 50 feet in diameter and 80 feet high and a central gilded spire rising 30 feet higher still. The summit of the pinnacle is 243 feet above the ground, and throughout the structure are countless evidences of the labor and skill expended by the 20,000 men who toiled under pitiless masters, and for little pay, for 17 long, weary years. Nor was it merely their remuneration that was scanty, and often altogether wanting, for the rapacious officers doled out the daily allowance of corn for the laborers with almost the parsimony of misers. It is a beautiful building—a wonderful structure, and in some respects deserves to rank above the coarser pyramids as one of the seven wonders of the world; but to our eyes its beauty is tainted with the thought of selfish sorrow or vanity indulged at the expense of toil and hardship to suffering thousands. Nor is this feeling engendered wholly from our knowledge of its history, for there is that in the building itself which is strongly suggestive of cold and haughty arrogance, mingled with an appearance of the finically luxurious which actually detracts greatly from the apparent altitude of the whole.

On our return to the city, we noticed ahead of us a company of people all standing still; and, when we drew nearer we heard the strains of weird music, if that may be so called to which there is no tune. As we approached we saw that several persons in red and white garments were playing to some 30 others. Our guide said "funeral," and on looking further up the street we saw the coffin, red in color, and of rude finish, slung on bamboo poles and carried by four men. When the music ceased, the procession moved on. I asked our guide if the dead man would be burned. "Oh! no: him Mohammedan; he no burn."

The men here ride bullocks as we do horses, and travel at a good rate of speed. They pack their oxen with merchandise and farm produce as Mexicans load mules. At some of the wells we saw two yoke of oxen; and, while one pair is hauling up a leather bag full of water, the others are walking back by a parallel track so as to be ready to pull up the other bag, in this way keeping up a steady use of the well for irrigation.

The absence of the better class of native women is very noticeable in the streets of Agra, as, indeed, in all other cities we have visited in India. To-day we met several of the highest caste covered from the top of their heads to the soles of their feet, with only openings for the eyes in the cloths which concealed their faces.

We left Agra at 7 A. M., Wednesday, Jan. 13, and arrived at 4 P. M., the same day, at Delhi, the Rome of Asia, a city of 193,000 inhabitants. Besides the modern city, it consists of ruins extending some nine miles north and south and from three to six miles east and west. These ruins, covering some 45 square miles, represent seven different cities built by as many kings. Conquered by the Mohammedans in 1191, Delhi enjoyed almost uninterrupted prosperity until 1739, when its people put to the sword a Persian garrison introduced by Nadir Shah. Terrible was the vengeance of the latter, when reenforcement arrived, for from sunrise until noon of the 10th of March the troops engaged in a general massacre, while flames ravaged the devoted city. A cessation of hostilities was finally agreed upon at the intercession of the emperor, but the retiring Nadir bore away immense treasures, variously estimated at from $150,000,000 to $350,000,000, including the Peacock Throne and the Kohinoor. In 1803 Delhi came into the possession of the English, whose rule was unbroken until the Sepoy mutiny of 1857, when scenes were enacted here which render it one of the most historical sites in Asia, the British finally triumphing under Gen. Nicholson, one of the greatest soldiers by which Britain has ever been defended in India.

On Friday, Jan. 15, we drove 11 miles to see the Kutab tower, which is the pride of Delhi as the Taj is of Agra. It is 238 feet high and tapers from a diameter of 47 feet at the base to one of less than 9 at the top. It is divided into five gigantic stories, respectively about 95, 50, 41, 25 and 22 feet in height, marked by balconies and girdled with inscribed bands. The three lower stories are red sandstone, but the others are veneered with white marble. It was shaken by an earthquake in 1806, but was restored in 1829, although not wholly in keeping with the original plan; later, lightening has played havoc with it, and now Yankee rods adorn its walls. From the top I could see from 40 to 60 castles, mosques and towers now in ruins, although many are nearly hidden by trees. The road hither from Delhi is called the Appian Way, and not inappropriately, so much does it resemble the old Roman thoroughfare of that name. Here, too, Delhi rests on her seven sites, as Rome on her seven hills.

Tuk is a spot sacred to Mohammedans, who hold a sort of camp meeting here once a month commencing of a Friday night. It so happened that we had chosen for our visit the day preceding the evening for one of these meetings to begin, and before we had descended from the tower, the devotees had begun to arrive. But the guide made them stand back until we had reached the ground. What a motley set they were, worshippers, dancing girls, men playing on small drums and women on a kind of a pumpkin vine flute! Jewelry hung from their noses and ears, and encircled wrists and ankles. We asked the dancers to show their skill, and they gave us such pirouetting as is seldom seen in America. They then asked for money, and by signs said that if we would put it on the ground they would bend backward and pick it up with their eyes. This seemed rather a strong claim, but four pieces were thrown down, and they were quickly picked up in the manner promised. They stuck the pieces edgewise in the ground, just hard enough to hold them from falling, and then seized them between the lids and brought them up gracefully. On the way back to the city we met pilgrims on foot with blankets, many having pipes two feet long or more, bullocks bearing one or two riders each, and teams carrying from 6 to 18 people, some 2000 in all. As we arrived about noon, I have no doubt that fully 10,000 Mohammedans worshipped that night at the Kutab Minar.

At this season it is by no means warm in this part of India, the thermometer standing mornings at from 45 to 50 degrees. Often when the sun is well up, we keep our umbrellas raised, to ward off the cold winds which here blow from the west, as at home.

For the foundation of the Jama Masjid, or Great Mosque of the Shah Jahan, the top of a large rock was smoothed, and on this solid base was erected what is called the largest building of its kind in the world. Some thirty stone steps or terraces extending along three sides lead to three massive gates or doors covered with well-wrought plates of copper and brass, through which we enter a quadrangle 325 feet square paved with large sandstones and having in the centre a marble bowl and fountain. On three sides of this quadrangle is an open sandstone cloister 15 feet wide, supported by pillars of the same material. On the west side of the square stands the mosque proper, 201 by 120 feet in size, flanked by two minarets 130 feet high. It is said to have required for its erection the labor of 5000 men for six years, and, although it does not follow implicitly the canons of architectural law, yet, as Fergusson well says—"the whole forms a group intelligible at the first glance, and, as an architectural object, possesses a variety of outline and play of light and shade which few buildings can equal." The Mohammedans worship here every Friday, which corresponds with our Sunday. We arrived at 1 P. M., and found the mosque already thronged with worshippers; who, as they came in, would at once repair to the marble basin in the centre, about 65x50 feet in size, wash their hands, face and feet, rinse their mouths and wet the tops of their heads, wipe with coarse towels, and then take their places in rows in front of the priests. We were directed to the open cloister or gallery on the outer part of the quadrangle. It was a strange sight, as the clock struck one, in a crowd of so many thousand people differing greatly in color, dress and appearance, to see them all, at a word from a priest, fall upon their knees and there remain for about two minutes, the priest talking all the time; then bow their heads in unison and so continue another two minutes; then hold their faces to the pavement for two minutes more, and then return to their kneeling posture, and soon rise to their feet. This was repeated several times, with other exercises of a similar nature.

Passing from some mausoleum of Cyclopean grandeur, of the extreme of Oriental magnificence,—of fairy delicacy of decoration; or from some mosque or temple in which were worshipping with the greatest zeal 10,000 devotees of Mohammed or Buddha, we looked about us with far more than ordinary interest to learn the condition of a people among whom were to be seen such marvels of architecture and religious fervor. Great is the contrast! The hotels are all of one story, so our rooms, about 21 feet square, are all on the ground floor. They are 20 feet high, without windows except a small hole for ventilation on one side near the top; and are entered by two doors, the upper half of each glazed, one leading into our bedroom or sitting room, and the other into a dressing closet or press on the further side of which is another door opening upon the rear yard, and having a bamboo screen at the top. On the floor is a carpet of hemp. Two small iron bedsteads in the middle of the room, without springs, offer the hospitality of a single mattress for each not so thick as the length of my middle finger, with one pillow stuffed with cotton at the head, with sheets and pillow slips, and such other bedding as we see fit to furnish ourselves. A small table, a looking-glass eighteen inches high, two little shelves, three cane chairs and a few wardrobe hooks complete the furniture of a first class hotel in Delhi, and indeed, in many other large cities in India. No rocking chairs or windows are allowed to dispute the claims of the iron bed to the honor of being the most tempting convenience in the room. Sometimes there is an open fire-place, but it is for ornament chiefly, as we did not care to make smoked beef of ourselves. The bath rooms have stone floors upon which we are to pour the water when we have bathed. It runs out through holes like the scuppers of a vessel, and we always kept one eye open to see that snakes did not run in at the same holes. There is usually a portable tin bath-tub, although often a large wash-tub is made to take its place. This room sometimes boasts a portable commode, and a small window opening high upon the side. Little birds fly in and out as fearless as can be, for the people here do not kill them, or indeed any form of animal life, not excepting snakes. Squirrels are tame, monkeys run over the top of the houses, and crows are everywhere. In some places the crows would fly right into our arms if offered food, and we had to shut our doors to keep them from sharing our rooms. As to the food in these caravansaries, I will only say that I have left some 20 pounds of valuable flesh somewhere in India, and I think it is pretty evenly distributed among half a dozen hotels.

With such sumptuous quarters and entertainment provided for the stranger, one would hardly expect to find the people wasting much substance on riotous living; and, if he did, he would be sadly disappointed. He would find the aristocracy living in houses not unlike our hotels, except that members of the royal family and officers of high rank have their fine palaces, but the people, as a rule, dwell in mere hovels. The chief occupation is agriculture, but in city and country alike in northern India, where wood is not plenty, one economy practised so generally that it really seemed the chief industry of the inhabitants, shows the general poverty better, perhaps, than anything else I can name. Everywhere we saw them, from children of four years to gray-haired men and women, gathering the excreta of cattle, rolling it into balls which they would then flatten and put in baskets carried on their heads. We would sometimes pass 20 jackasses, or sometimes bullocks, loaded down with these flattened balls placed in large nets or baskets. We would see them everywhere, placed on the roofs or against the sides of buildings to dry in the sun for fuel. Many stores kept them for sale, and the gathering and selling of this article seems to furnish occupation for a large number of people. After all, Bishop Heber hit the nail right on the head in regard to India as a whole. How often do the words of that grand old hymn come to our minds as we drive through these Indian towns! How long will it require for the leaven of Christianity and civilization to be felt throughout this huge lump?

The fortress of New Delhi is about 1½ miles in circumference, and contains within its enclosure several fine structures: Its walls are 40 feet high.

At Old Delhi we saw the Staff of Feroy Shah, a single shaft of red sandstone 40 feet high, 10 feet, 4 inches in girth at the base, and tapering slightly towards the top. It was brought here from Meerut, and is 2200 years old. On it is the oldest writing in India, in the Pali language, certain commands for the promotion of religion and virtue issued by Dhumma Asoka Piyadasi, B. C. 320, who became king by murdering 90 relatives standing more nearly in the line of direct succession. Perhaps he thought his experience in an opposite course sufficient to warrant him in emphasizing the value of a holy life!

It was from the top of the Sher Maudir near by that the great Humayun fell down stairs to his death, having risen too suddenly after the call to prayer from the adjacent Mosque. His tomb near by is said to have been the model from which the Taj at Agra was designed: it was built by his widow Haji Begum, and needs no description beyond the statement that it is a worthy prototype of the great Taj Mahal.

Not far away, enclosed in a marble screen, is the sarcophagus of Johanara Begum, daughter of Emperor Shahjahan who refused to share the guilty glory of the court of her brother, Aurungzebe, preferring to stay with her deposed father in captivity at Agra. But she was brought to Delhi by the tyrant, and died there in 1681. On her tomb are these words:—"Let no rich coverlet adorn my grave; this grass is the best covering for the tomb of the poor in spirit, the humble, the transitory Jahanara, the disciple of the holy men of Christ, the daughter of the Emperor Shahjahan." Such is her lowly grave here, but at Agra her father commemorated her worth in the magnificent Jamma Masjid, which towers aloft from a base 130x100 feet, the plinth alone being 11 feet high.

Standing on "The Ridge" near by, a lofty elevation for India, we look abroad over the adjacent country, with its many domes, minarets and towers, remnants of a vanished splendor. The mosques in the distance, here and there, the marble and red sandstond domes of the great mausoleums under which the Moghuls were entombed in Oriental pomp, the surrounding country all dusty and dreary and desolate, the blue waters of the Jumna forever rolling into the distance, the old fort and walls of the city crumbling into ruin, all serve to remind us that even kings in all their glory have, too, to pass away. But, after all, how character shines forth above this wealth of pomp and splendor; for, while the names of many proud tyrants are now known only through the piles of stones they reared, no traveler thinks of leaving Delhi without first visiting the humble grave of the faithful Jahanara or that of the equally faithful Gen. Nicholson near the Cashmere Gate. Such thoughts are only intensified as we visit the grand palace of the Moghuls, a mile and a quarter in circumference, with its stately audience halls of rarest architectural beauty. It was of this building that Moore wrote in Lalla Rookh:

"Oh! if there be an elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this, it is this."

But space would fail me should I attempt to adequately describe the beauties of this vast structure, or, indeed, of scores of lesser ruins. In Rome, one ancient city is considered well worthy a long pilgrimage: but here seven have risen and fallen in succession, and each has left scores of interesting ruins. Wealthy indeed, must India have once been, judging from these ruins, but what has become of all her riches, for surely her people now, by hundreds of thousands, are in the lowest depths of squalid poverty. Has she indeed benefited by the boasted civilization which white men have carried to her shores?

Decay of the Teeth

Arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic toothwash, Fragrant SOZODONT, will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes those ravages which people sustain in their teeth from the use of sweet and acid articles.

ABOUT THE COUNTY

MIDDLETOWN.

Middletown Politics.

EDITOR MERCURY: Will you kindly allow me space in your columns to correct a few of the errors that were published in the Providence Journal Thursday Speaking of Senator Bull the Journal says:

"The opposition to him at first was small, but it has gradually grown larger until last year it became very pronounced and in a measure successful. The Republicans who do not like Senator Bull's management placed an opposition ticket in the field by the use of nomination papers, and made a strong fight for it on the day of the election. Senator Bull was re-elected, though his majority was cut down to a marked and not altogether comfortable degree: but his associate on the regular Republican ticket was defeated by one majority by Abram A. Brown, the nominee on the opposition ticket.

The facts in the case are that in 1890 Mr. Bull had a majority over Mr. Congdon, who ran on nomination papers, of 30, and in 1891, he had a majority of 72 over both a Republican and a Democratic opponent. This does not look much like a reduced majority. In the caucus of 1891, when Senator Bull was re-nominated, Mr. A. A. Brown was nominated for Representative without opposition, Col. Bull's friends making no opposition to him. Mr. Brown afterwards signed the nomination papers of an opposition candidate for Senator, which so enraged many of the Republicans that they voted for a candidate in opposition to Mr. Brown and came within two votes of defeating him.

The caucus last Monday night was the largest one ever held in this town. The Journal says of it:

It is supposed that the friends of Col. Bull had the caucus called for the last night on which it could be held for the purpose of making it difficult or impossible for the opposition to prepare and file nomination papers.

The caucus was called on the same night as both the Republican and Democratic caucuses were held in Newport and in many other parts of the State. It was conducted in the most harmonious and fair manner, and every one departed seemingly good natured. The nominees of the caucus are both young, successful business men and have been life long Republicans. Neither of them in fact ever voted any other than the Republican ticket. Col. Bull is in no way responsible for the unfortunate split in the party in this town, and the local pride, if nothing more, ought to insure him the vote of both wings. There is more at stake now than simply the local issues which divide us on town matters. CITIZEN.

COURT OF PROBATE.—The Court of Probate held its usual monthly session at the Town Hall on Monday with a full attendance of its members.

The fourth account of William Allan, guardian of Philip Caswell, was again continued to the third Monday of April on motion of John R. Caswell.

The petitions for the appointment of a guardian of Alfred Southwick, continued from the hearing thereon held on the 20th ult., were disposed by appointing John Dring guardian and fixing his bond at $500. Katherine Southwick the wife of Alfred S. Southwick, has appealed from the decree admitting to record the last will and testament of her husband and the appeal has been entered to be heard at the September Term of the Supreme Court.

The second and final account of Benjamin T. Brown, administrator on the estate Hannah C. Carter, was allowed and ordered recorded, as were also the fourth and final account of Edward Almy, administrator on the estate of Sarah E. Fales, and his second and final account as administrator on the estate of William B. Fales.

An inventory of the personal estate of Ruth Peckham was allowed and ordered recorded.

On the estate of John Gould, Abraham Anthony was appointed administrator and required to give bond in the sum of $16,000 with Thomas Coggeshall and Charles Albro as sureties. Joseph S. Anthony, George R. Chase and Clarke T. Barker were appointed appraisers on the estate.

The will of Hannah F. Allen was proved and ordered recorded as was also the will of William E. Prince. Letters testamentary on the Prince estate were directed to issue to Lewis Cass Ledyard, without bond, as the executor of the will.

IN TOWN COUNCIL.—Account of Clarke Henry Congdon, surveyor of road district No. 2, for carting crushed stone and repairing highways amounting to $219; account of James H. Barker surveyor of road district No. 4, for carting stone and other labor and amounting to $91.70; account of Stephen B. Congdon, surveyor of road district No. 7, for carting 924 tons crushed stone, $122.20, were allowed and ordered paid from the town treasury.

Miscellaneous accounts aggregating $271.65, were also allowed and ordered paid. Of this amount $152.95 was for the relief of the poor.

On nomination of the Democratic town committee, Joshua Coggeshall was appointed the Democratic supervisor of the election of State officers to be held April 6, and Nathaniel L. Champlin, Jr., was appointed the Republican supervisor of said election on nomination of the Republican town committee.

It was resolved that the same three propositions in reference to the repair and improvement of the highways should be printed and voted on as last year. The first provides for an appropriation of $1400 for ordinary repairs, the second for an expenditure of $1000, each in the West Main road, Green End avenue and Paradise avenue, in the construction of thorough macadamized roads, and the third for crushing 5000 tons more of stone.

CAUCUSES IN ABUNDANCE.—The Republicans held a caucus at the Town Hall on Monday evening and nominated Edward A. Brown for Senator and Christopher Ellery for Representative. There was considerable opposition to both of these nominations, which, after the adjournment, crystallized in getting out nomination papers for Clark Henry Congdon for Senator and Abram A. Brown for Representative. The Republicans, though largely in the majority, are yet divided by what seems irreconcilable differences, and which can never be adjusted, until broader views of public questions, more exalted ideas of political methods, and a more conciliatory spirit obtains as a governing principle among them.

On the same evening the Democrats held a caucus at the residence of Francis J. Coggeshall and nominated George Coggeshall for Senator and Charles Philip Smith for Representative.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—The farm of the late Nathaniel A. Brown near the West Main road was sold at public auction by his administration on Wednesday, James Anthony being auctioneer. The estate was sold subject to the dower of the widow and brought $1030, George A. Brown being the purchaser.

JAMESTOWN.

Politics seem to have taken a deep hold upon the citizens of Jamestown as well as upon those of the other towns in the state, this spring. The Republican caucus held Monday evening for the nomination of an Assembly ticket was the largest attended in the history of the town. Elijah Anthony was elected chairman and Mr. Charles E. Weeden, secretary, after which an informal ballot was taken for the nomination of senator, the voting list being used and Messrs. Amos Peckham and T. C. Watson acting as tellers. The result gave T. C. Watson 34, Elijah Anthony 26, and John B. Landers 1. A formal ballot was then taken, giving Mr. Watson 34 and Mr. Anthony 30, and Mr. Watson was declared the nominee for senator. Mr. John B. Landers was nominated for representative by acclamation. The Assembly ticket is the same as it has been for two years.

The Democrats have nominated I. B. Briggs for senator and Samuel Smith for representative, and the Prohibitionists have nominated I. B. Briggs and Wm. H. Gardiner.

TIVERTON.

The funeral of Mrs. Amanda F., wife of the Rev. C. J. Lait of Fall River, was solemnized Tuesday at 11 A. M. at the Congregational Church, Tiverton 4 Corners. Rev. J. H. Coe, of New Bedford, Rev. Messrs. Beady and Merritt of Fall River, and the Rev. Donald Brown of Tiverton, taking part in the services, which were largely attended. The choir rendered several appropriate selections.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Mrs. Lait was born in Tiverton, being the daughter of the late John Manchester of Nannaquaket, and one of a family of seven, and her death, which occurred on Saturday, after an illness of several weeks, makes the first break in the family. At the close of the service, her remains were taken to the Hillside Cemetery for interment.

Her five brothers, Albert, Andrew, William, Frederick and John, and Captain Henry F. King, her brother-in-law, acting as pall bearers.

The funeral arrangements were in charge of Henry Waring & Co. of Fall River.

The carriages of David Hart and Gideon Manchester collided in the dark the other evening, through the latter's carriage being on the wrong side of the road. The damage done was confined to the carriages.

Miss Howard, of West 14th street, New York, arrived in Newport, Tuesday morning, by steamer Plymouth.

Miss Lena Thompson, of London and New York, is in Tiverton.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Howard, of Providence, were in town Tuesday to attend the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. Waite.

PORTSMOUTH.

Some of our farmers have been getting ready for the spring work by getting seed potatoes and fertilizers, although the past week has not been conducive to planting.

The Prohibitionists have nominated as their candidate for Senator Winfield S. Sisson and John M. Brownell for Representative.

The entertainment given in Oakland Hall by the teacher and pupils of School District No. 1, on Tuesday evening of this week, was a grand success, and the receipts fully up to their expectations. We understand the money is to be devoted to paying for this organ and for a new desk for teachers' use.

The W. C. T. U. of this town are expecting John L. Thomas of New York, Secretary of the National Prohibition Committee, to give a temperance lecture in Eureka Hall on Monday evening next at 7.30 o'clock.

The almanac says spring began last Saturday, but we doubt if many think it was real spring weather.

Miss Eliza M. Elliott has returned from a visit to friends in Hazelton, Pa., and Brooklyn, L. I.

Mr. Isaac Aloro is quite sick with pleurisy.

Mr. Edward A. Coggeshall, builder, is making the needed repairs at the Bryer farm in Middletown for Mr. Carey.

The school in district No. 1, of this town, desire to extend a vote of thanks to all those who assisted at the entertainment held in Oakland Hall Tuesday evening, March 22, for their kind services rendered to help make the affair so successful.

Will The Divorces Stand?

The Fargo Argus says: The question is raised as to whether some of the divorces of prominent parties procured in South Dakota will be recognized in other states, or even in that state if the parties skip out and take up their residence elsewhere after the divorce is secured. The law requires a bona fide residence of three months in the state, and this is held to mean a residence taken up with the intention of making it permanent, of living there after the separation. It would be a bonanza for Sioux Falls if she could force all the wealthy parties who have secured legal separations there to become permanent residents. Mrs. Elliot Zbrowsky with her $80,000 a year income, and her husband's wealth fully as large, would be quite an acquisition. There are perhaps a dozen others whose bank accounts would materially swell the resources of the South Dakota depositors. It would be rather awkward for such of these parties as have married again to have their divorces upset and their present unions therefore declared illegal. It behooves them to retain some property interests at the place where they obtained their divorce, keep up at least a nominal residence there, and visit the place occasionally.

Mr. Lewis Fairbrother, one of Pawtucket's well-known octogenarians, died suddenly, March 17th. He had been prominently identified with the city, in both business and public affairs.

The Grand Jury of Providence County has found a true bill for criminal libel against David F. Lingane, editor of the Evening Telegram. Ex-City Engineer Samuel M. Gray, of Providence, is the plaintiff in the case.

Dr. Wm. B. Solomon's

BOTANICAL INSTITUTE.

Its Advantages Offered to the Sick of Fall River.

It is with pleasure we draw the attention of the readers of the MERCURY to this excellent institution which Dr. Solomon has located in the city of Fall River. Its advantages cannot be measured with money, as the many patients who have placed themselves under Dr. Solomon's treatment can testify. Although the Doctor has been with us but little over a year, he has by his uniform kindness and his courteous bearing won the respect and esteem of all with whom he has been brought in contact. Dr. William Solomon is a son of Dr. James M. Solomon, of Attleboro, Mass., who won such distinction as a physician throughout Massachusetts. The Doctor uses nature's own remedies, roots and herbs, and the success which has followed Dr. Solomon's efforts to alleviate suffering humanity in this section is somewhat marvelous. Unlike many in the same profession, Dr. Solomon's charges are most reasonable; in fact, are within the reach of all, and as he honestly tells his patrons whether they are curable or not, they readily rely upon his judgment and experience. To our readers in Bristol, Warren, Tiverton and New Bedford, we cheerfully recommend Dr. Solomon.
